Hard right's race jeers embarrass ministers

From Anthony Bevins, Political Correspondent, Blackpool

Conservative leaders were embarrassed and distressed yesterday by an open display of hard-right views on the issue of nand-right views on the issue of immigration and race relations in a Blackpool party conference debate that was littered with boos, jeers, hissing and the eventual ejection of a man who had heckled an Asian speaker repeatedly. The motion for debate, which, significantly, had been selected initially, by popular ballot of conference representatives, urged the Government to end all further permanent immigration from the Indian subcontinent, to bolster volun-tary repatriation, and to repeal all race relations legislation. The conference decisively rejected the proposals, but senior mininsters were disturbed last night that what they regard as the uglier expressions of right-wing Toryism should have been Frank Johnson

He received particularly strong applause when he said that the Comission for Racial Equality should be abolished. It was profoundly un-Conservative to believe that hearts and minds could be won over by legislation, and be added: "This is not racialism, it is realism".

But the most graphic scenes of the debate were reserved for the final speaker from the floor, Mr Paul Nischal, aged 40, an estate agent who had cootested Birmingham, Small Heath, in the general election in June, Mr. the general election in June, Mr. Nischal, who came to Britain only be sad as from New Delhi to 1964, said that the only people now restring into the United King dom were dependents and he demanded: "We live in a targing out backs and just steary conservatives all the deprive husbands of their loved ones?"

The minister advised the conference that it would not only be sad and futile if representatives - endorsed - the motion: "It would be a tragedy if lodgy we appeared to be turning out backs on the fair and just society which we as Conservatives all stand for and

His wife, Ann, who saw it as her duty to share his ordeal, earned some extra applanse for herself, and a welcoming was from Mr Denis Thatcher.

There was some booing from the back of the hall when Mr.

the applause and slapped him on the back for a brave speech of which the content, on the day, was mimportant. By now there was no booing.

There were groups of representatives who showed disapproval by sitting still and silent. But half the hall rose to the Parkinsons, and most of the rest would have done the same had Mrs Thatcher and the platform party given a lead. A critical moment for the minister and the party had been negotiated.

The belief that he can stay in office is not so widely shared in Blackpool as the hope. The artificiality of the conference setting makes the party's true mood unreadable. All that can safely be reported is that Mr Parkinson yesterday cleared another obstacle

Mr Aridor's decision to quit followed a storm of protest both inside and outside the Govern-ment caused by the publication of a secret and sweeping Treasury plan to link the entire economy to the US dollar, which would eventually have become legal tender.

The so-called dollarization scheme was leaked by the Tel Aviv newspaper, Yediot Aharo-not, and within hours led to angry calls for Mr Aridor to go. Throughout the day, Muslim militiamen stormed the offices of the Lebanese Communist Party in the city, shooting their way into buildings and murdering most of those who survived the initial assaults. A cloud of hlack smoke hung over Tripoli as the fighting continued into the evening.

Ironically, the battles in the north are a continuation of the conflict there during the 1975-76 civil war and so the reconciliation talks - which are intended to consolidate the ceasefire in the Chouf mountains above Beirut - can have little immediate effect on the bloodshed around Tripoli.

Mr Ness was describing a police operation to west London last January aimed at capturing David Martin who had escaped from custody some weeks earlier. On Wednesday, the jury was told that the police mistoook Mr Waldorf for the fugitive and Constable Finch opened fire on the car.

Yesterday, Mr Ness told the jury: "What I would have expected him to do was to get himself in a position where he could see whether or not it was Martin without putting himself in jeopardy."

The senior detective de scribed how he had brought including Constable Finch. Mr Ness said he had con-

It says that as a result of keeping down personnel costs and reducing overheads the ministry has succeeded in raising the proportion of the defence budget spent on equip-ment from 35 per cent 10 years ago to more than 45 per cent now, which is among the highest proportions in Nato. But there are limits to how much further that trend can be taken and it is of paramount importance that everything possible is done to halt the rise

Despite this disclaimer, Mr Curry's resignation, which he handed in without warning to the party leader, the Reverend Allan Hendrickse, was widely seen as evidence of strains within the party over its decision to participate in the Government's new constitutional structure.

The Government's Constitution Bill would create a new tricameral Parliament for whites. Coloureds and Indians Blacks, more than 70 per cent of the total population, would cootinue to have no parliamentary representation. The Bill has already been passed by the existing all-white Parliament and will be implemented if a majority of whites vote for it at a referendum on November 2.

received no answer. Mr Hendrickse said yesterday that if such a referendum were held and produced a "no" majority, his party would have to reconsider its position.

Glenn forces missiles issue into arena of presidential election

Senator John Glenn's proposal for a temporary freeze on the deployment of ground-launched craise missiles in Europe has created exactly the type of situation which the United States and its Nato partners wanted to avoid when they decided in December 1979 to go shead with deployment at the end of this year. In choosing the end of 1983 for the deployment of 572 Penhing 2 and cruise missles in Europe the Western leaders here deliberately trying to ensure that it would not become an issue in the 1984 American idential election.

However, Senator Glenn's proposal, made during a speech to the National Press Club in Washington on Wednesday, has brought the issue to the centre of the American political debate at a critical moment in the deadlocked Intermediate-range

There was a time not so hicenoing of a drunk".

But the big breakthrough came at the 1956 jazz festival in the Baltic port of Sopot: the thousands of jazz fans chan-ted: "jazz lives".

"It was like a Solidarity demonstration", comments one who has studied the period. Until these jazz fans had to rely mainly on broadcasts from Voice of America, memorizing the tunes as best they could because there were few, if any, tape recorders available.

The occasional jazz pro-gramme was heard on official radio when the presenter censor that jazz was the music of the oppressed black prolet-ariat of America rather than the pluto-capitalists of Wall

German groups visited Poland along with Western musicians, such as Dave Brubeck, all helping to shape Polish jazz. The other East European countries followed at a slower pace: in East Germany, for example, jazz emerged from the shadows only in the 1960s and the result is that the East Germans are wedded to free jazz.

In Poland the jazz community cross-fertilized with other artists: banned poets like music and frustrated filmmakers like Roman Polanski worked well with the jazz composers of Cracow.

Some experts now rate Poland along with Britain, Sweden, France and West Germany as a member of the European jazz elite. Certainly Polish jazz influence is dominant in Warsaw Pact countries and names like Jan The Bird: Wroblewski and Tomasz Stanko are common

The short answer is yes, some do.

Every week hundreds of thousands of advertisements appear for the very people they are addressed to.

A handful do not. They misrepresent the products they are advertising.

As the Advertising Standards Authority it is our job to make sure these ads are identified, and stopped.

> WHAT MAKES AN ADVERTISEMENT MISLEADING?

If a training course had turned a 7 stone weakling into Mr Universe the fact could be advertised because it can be proved.

But a promise to build 'you' into a 15 stone he-man would have us flexing our muscles because the promise could not always be kept.

'Makes you look younger' might be a reasonable claim for a

But pledging to take years off your life' would be an overclaim akin to a promise of eternal youth.

A garden centre's claim that its seedlings would produce 'a riot of colour in just a few days' might be quite contrary to the reality.

Such flowery prose would deserve to be pulled out by the roots.

If a brochure advertised a hotel as being 5 minutes walk to the beach, it must not require an Olympic athlete to do it in the time.

As for estate agents, if the phrase overlooking the river translated to backing onto a ditch, there would be nothing for it but to show their ad the door.

HOW DO WE JUDGE THE ADS WE LOOK INTO?

Our yardstick is The British Code of Advertising Practice.

Its 500 rules give advertisers precise practical guidance on what they can and cannot say. The rules are also a gauge for media owners to assess the acceptability of any advertising they are asked to publish.

we or the public challenge to back on their claims with solid evidence.

If they cannot, or refuse to, we ask them either to amend the ads or withdraw

Nearly all agree without any further argument.

In any case we inform the publishers, who will not know ingly accept any ad which we have decided contravenes the Code.

If the advertisor refuses to withdraw the advertisement he will find it hard if not impossible to have it published.

WHOSE INTERESTS DO WE REALLY REFLECT?

The Advertising Standards Authority was not created by law and has no legal powers.

Not unnaturally some people are sceptical about its effectiveness.

In fact the Advertising Standards Authority was set up by the advertising business to make sure the system of self control worked in the public interest.

For this to be credible, the ASA has to be totally independent of the business.

Neither the chairman nor the majority of ASA council members is allowed to have any involvement in advertising.

Though administrative costs are met by a levy on the business, no advertiser has any influence over ASA decisions.

Advertisers are aware it is as much in their own interests as it is in the public's that honesty should be seen to prevail.

If you would like to know more about the ASA and the rules it seeks to enforce you can write to us at the address below for an abridged copy of the Code.

At Dundo airport there was not a. single military aircraft. The Angolans are clearly not taking Savimbi's boasts very seriously, although on December 18 last year a three-span bridge over the River Cuilo, on the main road from Luanda to Dundo, was blown up and lorries on that route are continu-ally being attacked by rocket fire. Unita's claims have caused some anxiety, though. Early on the morning April 6 this year Peter Heap, manager of the Lucapa mine, 50 miles south of Dundo, was telephoned by a colleague farther up the road. The BBC World Service had just announced that Unita had claimed the capture of

The diamonds and the 700 or so expatriates (including 120 Britons) who work on the mines may, bowever. be better protected than at first appears. On November employees of a shadowy British firm called Defence Systems International arrived at the mines, ostensibly to help to stop smuggling. But the men, who are still there, have military backgrounds, and many of them are ex-SAS. One told me he had been recruited privately and bad no experience of preventive security operations. Like all expatriates, he denied having any access to weapons.

An attack from across the Zaireborder is a much greater worry. The first town across the border is Kolwezi, where in 1977 and 1978 mine workers were attacked and killed by Zairean exiles who had been living in Angola.

Where De Beers bas been solely concerned to stop smuggling, it has employed tough and dramatic methods - and, as in the case of Fred Kamil, tough and dramatic people. Kamil, a Lebanese who had been the godfather and bandit chief of the smugglers' trail that took diamonds from Sierra Leone to Liberia, was hired by De Beers in 1956 to end the smuggling. He did this by ambushing the caravans. Later he fell out with De Beers, tried to hijack an aircraft to extort money from them, and has claimed responsibility for the recent bomh attacks aimed at Oppenheimer interests in London.

The diamond trade is not an easy one to investigate. I asked the Department of Trade for a briefing about it. Their representative phoned back to say it was a one-company business and that the company in question, De Beer, demanded that all the information it gave the department should be held in confidence. The spokesman conceded that information on no other commodity was suppressed at the request of a private company.

She said she had phoned De Beers to ask whether it could help me, hut gathered from the company that I had already been in touch." I had. Charming and courteous it was, but De Beers keep the secrets of the diamond tradeas well protected as the diamonds.

The only loser in the diamond trade seems to be the lovelorn sucker who buys an engagement ring. The price of diamonds is controlled by De Beers. It owns many of the chief gem mines. makes exclusive contracts with the owners of the other mines and buys up whatever else appears on the open market. Much of it goes into the stockpile with which it manipulates the market. "Producer cooperative" is the phrase De Beers itself uses to describe the business, but it does not quite express the control it enjoys over the trade. Handling more than 80 per cent of all uncut gems it exerts enormous influence over the cutters and dealers. De Beers can prevent their buying elsewhere by threatening to withhold their regular supply, and discourage a second-hand trade so that diamonds do not keep their value.

No other commodity has ever been so tightly controlled by one man. De Beers is part of the Anglo American and Consolidated Goldfields groups, all sections of which are controlled by Harry Oppenheimer, the self-effacing, liberal monarch of the transnational, South African-based mineral empire.

Not even giants such as the Soviet Union or Zaire have managed to break the De Beers' cartel. Nor do they choose to leave it. It would not benefit any diamond producer to allow the diamond to find its own production or price levels in the market place. Angola is a new-born state ravaged by war and its leaders know little of the diamond world. It is at the mercy of De Beers.

Diamonds were first discovered in Angola in 1912. They are among the finest gems in the world. The Portuguese mined them until 1975, when they were producing more than two million carats a year. In the chaos that followed independence and the nationalization of the private Portuguese bolding, production dropped to ess than half a million carats in 1977. Although the Government now owns 77.21 per cent of the shares in the diamond company, and De Beers owns only 1.6 per cent, Angola has been forced to turn to De Beers not only to sell its diamonds but also to mine-

Mining and Technical Services, another De Beers company, is incorporated in Liechtenstein but its London office backs on to the De Beers complex at Holborn Circus. It was formed in the early 1960s to deal with hlack African countries for whom a direct relationship with a South African company was politically out of the question. Angola, where the company has operated since 1977, is its biggest and most sensitive operation.

The Portuguese mined the river beds but now De Beers in sists that the Angolan company mines the alluvial terraces. River beds such as the one at Dunge, the furthest west of all the mines, offerdramatic but unpredictable results. The river has been diverted by a great damand the ravine excavated. At the bottom the heavy diamonds, battered and sifted by acons of annual floods, have gathered into nooks where they can be found by the score. At times there is one Angolan guard, armed with a Russian-made Klashnikov rifle, for each Angolan worker. One worker had been shot a few days before I arrived. It was not clear that hehadbeensmuggling.

Angola does have a serious smuggling problem. According to Sr Alberto Bento Ribeiro, the Minister of Industry, Angola has lost $100m of diamond revenue in the past 18 months through smuggling, possibly one third of total production. Diamang, he said, will make no profit this year - an extraordinary situation for a diamond producer.

As we drove south by Land Cruiser along the straight red-dirt road which rolls over the hills to Lucapa, we passed a new motor-cycle weaving unsteadily in the other direction. Des Jenkin, the security adviser with MATS, wrinkled his nose, "A sure sign of smuggling", he said. "The workers will swap a diamond for a new pair of shoes. A motor hike is quite a good

In the past nine months the there is paranoia in Angola.

The mining heartland of Angola and Jonas Savimbi, leader of the Unita guerrillas, (left) who claims a hand in the diamond smuggling. Above, a fistful of diamonds. Workers will readily swap a diamond for a new pair of shoes. A motor hike is a fair price.

Angolans have curbed the flow from the sorting houses. Seventy members of the Department of Diamond Security (DSD) have been on security courses at Brocket Hall in Hertfordshire.

The DSD is responsible to the Ministry of Internal Security and it is led in Lunda province by a short tough, arrogant man called Rodriguez, who looks as though he was born with an automatic pistol at his belt. While I was interviewing the local governor in his own house, Rodriguez wandered in without knocking and took over the answers. He told me that more than 400 people had been arrested for smuggling this year and that some trials had already taken place. He clearly does not trust the foreign

'We don't ask too many questions'

Some of the men arrested have been Portuguese of Angolan airline pilots, and so far inst is the limit of the trail. Some observers say that senior party officials have been caught smuggling and the President Eduardo dos Santos has ordered a cover-up. There is no evidence that this is so. The MPLA government might survive such a scandal even if it was true. Semor party officials have been ruthlessly purged for far less grave offences.

Once the diamonds have left Angola their passage is easy. No European countries need to know their source. Most of them find their way via Lisbon to the famous Pelikenstrasse in Antwerp, the centre of Europe's diamond cutting trade. Here De Beers. representatives buy them up uncut and at every Diamang board meeting De Beers representatives tell the Angolans what has been bought on the open market. They can even tell them which mine they have come from.

De Beers says it can do nothing about the smuggling from the huying end. "We don't ask too many questions", said its spokesman. "We simply tell them to tighten up their security and suggest how they might do

Angolan officials say that De Beers buy smuggled diamonds more cheaply than contract ones but De Beers denies this and points out that smuggled diamonds come sixth-hand and each wants a rake off. One former De Beers employee said that De Beers was primarily interested in control, the short-term price was secondary to that. He also suggested that the dealers in smuggled diamonds were far better valuers than Angola's and would get a better price.

This may prove to be Angola's longterm problem rather than smuggling. Diamond prices are fixed by a De Beer's sample parcel against which uncut stones are sorted and priced. Every stone over 14 carats is individually negotiated. Sorting and valueing is a skill which can be learnt only by years of experience of diamonds and De Beers methods. Angola bas to use an agent to do this vital joh at present but is having 12 Angolans trained in the basic techniques. Predictably the training is being conducted by De

The final say over the value of a diamond lies with De Beers, and since the difference between one category and another may be as much as $30, an overall undervaluation can result in a loss of thousands of dollars for the producer. De Beers make sure that the producer cannot find out the price at which they sell the diamonds to the dealers, so that they cannot learn by experience.

A South African company has a puppet-master's control over Angola's second largest foreign exchange earner. Angola spends more than half at foreign exchange fighting a war against Unita, the South African backed rebel group, and against South Africa itself which seems determined to bring down the Luanda government. yesterday and flew into a rage. Her wrath was caused by a clothes feature based on the supposed Russian look, with lots of reds and blacks splashed around. I couldn't see anything to object to in it.

I'm not objecting to the idea", she said.
"It's just that my friend Polly and I have been wearing reds and blacks for the last ten months, and now they come along and pretend it was their idea."

There is something peculiarly painful about being ahead of a trend. All those people who had been shouting the praises of ragime from the rooftops, unheard, must have experienced very bitter-sweet emotions when Joshua Rifkin came along and made Scott Joplin famous overnight. My son, who is experimenting with his personal appearance at an age when I didn't even know I had one, stared open-mouthed the other day at a TV film of the Arsenal team of 1934. What amazingly brilliant haircuts," he said. "They were 50 years ahead of their

Of course, Arsenal didn't know that at the time. What must be equally painful is trying to set a trend and not seeing it take nff. I was talking to a man last year whn works for IDV and couldn't understand why J & B whisky, a market leader in the States, hadn't really taken off here. He asked me what Scotch I drank and I told him it was Famous Grouse.

But why is it Famous Grouse?" "Well," I said lamely", "quite a lot of my friends mentioned it to me, and said it was the Scotch, so I thought I'd try....

Ah, the word of mouth method!" he cried "That's the way to do it, But how did they do it? Ah, the cunning devils."

t's true. The word of mouth thing does work. People occasionally whisper to me that the malt whisky is the Macallan, which I became convinced of, till people started whispering to me that Cardhu was the malt whisky. I even went out and bought a bottle of Cardhu, and indeed it was very good; my children, temporarily abandoning clothes and haircuts, tested it and urged me to buy some more. But in already. What I'd like to be, fleetingly and unworthily, is just ahead of a trend.

thought I was last week when I encountered Chaberlay Nouveau, an interesting red wine from Burgundy which can get here six weeks before Beaujolais Nouveau and may well make inroads into it. But before I could put pen to paper it was already being written about, so it is no good to me as a trend; I am already four or five days behind.

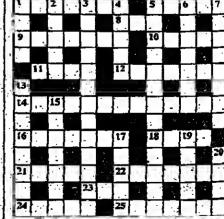

And then it suddenly occurred to me that there is one trend I am ahead of and will always be ahead of. Pisco. Pisco is a Peruvian spirit, colouriess and strong, which I encountered in Peru trace years ago in the snape of pisco sc-1, a sert of cocktail made from frothed egg white, think, cinnamon, It is lethal and lovely, and though well known to every visitor to Peru, totally unknown over here.

This is because the Peruvians have a genius amounting almost in the British genius for developing things and not letting the rest of the world know about it. It is as if, having given us the potato. Peru lay back exhausted and thought its world role was finished.

Last Saturday I went as a tourist to the newly revamped Harrods Food Halls, and there asked in the wine department for a bottle of pisco. They had a tremendously ugly black bottle, carved in the shape of an Inca image, and made in Italy. "But we are expecting stocks from South America soon of Chilean pisco," the man said.

Chilean pisco! What an outrage. It is like boasting of English whisky or French stout The Chileans and the Peruvians have never got on very well, being next door neighbours, and to make it worse the Chileans have always been a touch more enterprising, but when it comes to marketing a Peruvian drink . . . Still, it solves my problem. I'am ahead of the Peruvian pisco trend and If Peru keeps up its present marketing strategy, I always will be. How nice to be able to plug an unavailable drink, and thus be innocent of all PR pressure.

can suspect only oreasing diffi-culties or digestion problems.

At Sheffield Children's Hospital and the London School of Hygiene and Trapical Medicine, however, doctors have taken a different approach for ten years now. Instead of seeking a cause for cot deaths they are trying to prevent them.
Since 1973 the doctors assessing ways of spotting children in danger have found that babies born to young mothers who already have several children are most at risk. The extra attention these babies have received in Sheffield over the years has prevented at least 50 cot deaths in the city, they estimate. Now doctors in other parts of the country are trying out the system.

According to Dr Paul Griffiths, CMV expert and senior lecturer in virology at the Royal Free Hospital in London, in the UK alone CMV is responsible for around 400 mentally handicapped babies a year - this is more than german measles.

The difficulty is that CMV, like other viruses in the herpes group to which it belongs, has learned to survive in the body even when the immnne system has produced antibodies. Dr Griffiths and other workers are trying to find out if these antibodies can at least stop CMV from getting across the

They switched off the lights, finished the operation in daylight and within three hours the young man's skin was back to normal.

Euthanasia issue

handicapped dren is possibly the most contentious ethical issue of the last couple of years. Many dilcmmas raised by the medical and legal professions continue to reverberate in general discussions.

Euthanasia

A challenging report of the views of 78 parents of Down's Syndrome children has appeared in the most recent issue of the Journal of Medical Ethics. The parents, who clearly have much more direct experience of the consequences of present practice than any pro-fessional, were questioned on their opinions on abortion for handicapped foctuses as well as entha-nasia. For compassionate reasons the differences between active and passive enthanasia were not pressed. Most of the parents were in favour of abortion for handicapped focus-es, though the picture was much more complicated for cuthanasia. Parents were more likely to consider handicapped babies if they were from prosperous households than those parents in lower social classes. But if the handicapped was Down's there was no such clear-cut divide.

Cold comfort

One of the most distressing side effects of anti-cancer therapy is rapid loss of hair. Cytotoxic drugs are intended to destroy cancer cells but, as well as wiping out the baddies, because their action is indiscriminate they knock out many other active cells including hair follicles.

Over the last two years some patients have been spared the distress by wearing a "cold cap" while the drugs are injected.

The patient's hair is usually dampened to improve conduction and the cap is put in place about 20 minutes before the injection until about 30 minutes after. This chills the scalp so the blood supply to the hair follicles is temporarily suspended while the drug is "fixed" in other parts of the body.

A half smile flickers across the face of Victoria Hamilton as she sorts through the few precious photo-graphs of her life with Captain John Hamilton, MC of the Special Air Service, who died a hero in the last days of the Falkands war. "We both knew he was going to die, that he wasn't coming back", she says.

"John just would not let go of my hand when it was time finally to go. He said he might be going to war and might not be coming back, and Thank you for being such a super wife. He said 'I can go knowing you're behind me all the way. His men had to say 'Come on Boss' to get him to let go. Then they drove Captain Hamilton was concerned about the effect his career in the SAS about the effect his career in the SAS had oo his wife: "He only joined knowing I would be happy letting him go and I realized all the dangers but I also know how much he enjoyed it. John could appreciate how in some ways being in the SAS is a very selfish thing. But be cancelled once and was so miserable.

"After he was killed it upset me very much that people came up to me and said it was a good thing be was dead as he was just a trained killer. I even stopped having my hair done. When people find out your busband is in the SAS they think you're oot human."

Not surprisingly Marcus has remained at the SAS barracks in Hereford; probably the only place oo earth he can get the exercise he is

Hamilton regarded his military career very seriously and it took him to Cyprus, South Armagh, Belize and even the French Commando School at Trier: "But he oever broke a bone, he was so careful", his widow says.

A senior Falklands official, who had close cootact with the SAS, said that the Argentines who surrounded the two meo waited for one of them to go to the latrine before shooting Hamilton in the back in the hills near Port Howard. "There is some truth in that story", said Mr Robin Lee, of Port Howard, who helped hury Hamilton. "It was the reason why the radio was oot being

"We discovered that there were four SAS, two that went to observe the Argies and two who stayed back. That was Hamiltoo and a Fijian sergeant. They were surrounded and taken by surprise. The Argies told us later of bow John fought to the last."

'He was medically minded and probably realized he was oot going to come through", said Victoria. "The only possible way out would have been the water. I have seen it; it was very cold and they wouldn't have survived." So in the knowledge of almost certain death he fought on. Victoria has a picture of this other Hamilton, a stern warrior with an automatic rifle.

'I worry about the time between when he was shot in the back and the shot that killed him. Did he worry about me and the dog before he was killed? I hope not. He did oot go oot there to be killed, but if he had to die he would have preferred to die properly as he did, fighting the enemy", she says.

Jury can convict of lesser offence in bodily harm cases

Regina v Wilson (Clarence) Regina v Jenkins (E.J.) Regina v Jenkins (R.P.)

Before Lord Fraser of Tullybelton, Lord Elwyn-Jones, Lord Edmund-Davies, Lord Roskill and Lord [Speeches delivered October 13]

On a charge of inflicting grievous bodily harm contrary to section 20 of the Offences against the Person Act 1861 it was open to a jury to return a verdict of not guilty as charged but guilty of occasioning actual bodily harm (contrary to section 47 of the 1861 Act). Further, on a charge of burglary contrary to section 9 (1) (b) of the Theft Act 1968 the particulars of the offence being that the accused having entered a building as trespassers, it was open to a jury to return a verdict of not guilty as charged but guilty of assault occasioning actual bodily harm.

The House of Lords unanimously

so held in allowing two appeals by prosecutors. One appeal was against the decision of the Court of Appeal (Lord Justice Watkins, Mr Justice Cantley and Mr Justice Hirst), who had quashed the conviction of Clarence Wison (The Times February 7) at Kingston upon Thames Crown Court (Judge Rubin) the jury having been directed that on a charge against him under section 20 they could convict of the alternative assault offence.

The second appeal was against the decision of the Court of Appeal (Lord Justice Purchas, Mr Justice Staughtoo) (The Times, February 26) quashing the coovictions of Edward John Jenkins and Ronald Patrick Jenkins at Canterbury Crown Court (Mr Recorder Michael Lewis QC) of the assault offence as an alternative on the burglary charge.

Both appeals involved considering the true construction of section 6(3) of the Criminal Law Act 1967. to be returned in specific cases or which provides: "Where, on a person's trial... the jury find bim not guilty of the offence specifically charged in the indictment, but the allegations in the indictment on the indictment on the indictment of the phrase allegations in the indictment of the phrase allegations in the indictment of the phrase correct of the control of the phrase allegations in the indictment of the phrase correct of the control allegations to the indictment amount to or include (expressly or by implication) an allegation of another offence ... the jury may find him guilty of that other offece

Section 20 of the 1861 Act provides: "Whoever shall unlawful-iy and maliciously wound or inflict any grievous bodily harm upon any other person ... shall be guilty ... [of an offence]".

Section 47 provides: "Whosoever shall be convicted ... of any assault occasioning actual bodily harm shall be liable Section 9 of the 1968 Act provides: "(1) A person is guilty of burglary if - (a) he coters any building as a trespasser with intent to commit any ... offence ... (2)... of inflicting on any person therein any grievous bodily harm... Mr Michael Hill. QC and Mr Derck Zeitlin for the Crown in the Wilson appeal; Mr Anthony Scrivener, QC and Mr David Guy for Wilson; Mr Michael Hill, QC and Mr Anthony Webb for the Crown in the Jenkins appeal; Mr David Guy and Mr Gregory Stone for the lenkinses.

LORD ROSKILL, with whose speech all their Lordships agreed, said that before 1967 the view was widely held that at common law on a charge under section 20 of the 1861 Act a defendant might be convicted of at least common

In R v Lillis ([1972] 2 Q B 236) a five-judge Court of Appeal stated:
"The object of section 6(3) of the The object of section 6(3) of the 1967 Act was to provide a general rule continuing and combining the rules of common law and the provisions of most of the statutes

His Lordship accepted that statement as correct. Although Lillis was correctly decided, it applied R v Springfield ((1969) 53 Cr App R 608), and the question was open whether Springfield was correctly decided.

In Springfield Lord Justice Sachs who gave the judgment, said that the question arose, where an indictment charged a major offence without setting out any particulars of the matters relied on, what was the correct test for ascertaining which expressly or impliedly included an allegation of a lesser offence and that the test was to see whether it was a necessary step towards establishing the major offence to prove the commission of the lesser offence; in other words, is the lesser offence an essential ingredient of the major one?"

"Major offences" and "lesser offences" nowhere appeared io offences nowhere appeared to section 6(3) which said nothing about it being "a occessary step" towards establishing the "major offence" to prove the commission of the lesser offence, so that the so-called lesser offence had to be an "essential ingredient" of the major

Four possibilites were envisaged by section 6(3). First, the allegation to the indictment expressly amounted to an allegation of another offence. Second, the allegation to the indictment impliedly amounted to an allegation of another offence. Third, the allegation in the indictment expressly. gation in the indictment expressly included an allegation of another offence. Fourth, the allegation in the indictment impliedly included an allegation of another offence.

If any one of those four requirements was fulfilled, then the accused might be found guilty of that other offence. There was a clear antithesis in was satisfied, then the stated consequences would follow.

Lord Justice Sachs in Springfield had asked the right question but be applied the wrong test in order to

The allegation of "inflicting grievous bodily harm", so far as physical injuries were concerned, at least impliedly if not indeed expressly, had to include the infliction of "actual bodily harm" because the infliction of the more serious injuries had to include the infliction of the less serious injuries. Did the allegation of "inflicting" include an allegation of "assault".

The problem had arisen because English case law had proceeded along two different paths. One group of cases beld that a verdict of assault was a possible alternative on a charge under section 20.
In the other group grievous bodily harm was said to have been inflicted without any assault having taken place, unless of course the offence of assault were in be given a much wider significance than was usually attached to it.

attached to it.

His Lordship was content to accept, as had the Supreme Court of Victoria in R v Salisbury (1976) VR 452) that there could be an infliction of grievous bodily harm cootrary to section 20 without an assault being committed.

The critical question therefore was whether - it being accepted that was whether - it being accepted that a charge of inflicting grievous bodily harm contrary to section 20 might not necessarily involve an allegation of assault, but might nonetheless do so, and in very many cases would involve such an allegation - the allegations in a section 20 charge "include either expressiv or by iroplication" allegations of assault occasioning actual bodily barm.

If "ioflicting" rould, as the cases showed, include "inflicting by assault", then even though such a charge might not necessarily do so, his Lordship did not see why on a fair reading of section 6(3) those allegations did not at least impliedly include "inflicting by assault". That was sufficient for present purposes although it was also a possible view that those former allegations expressly included the other alle-

Once the reasoning in Springfield was rejected, and the reasoning to his Lordship's speech was accepted, it followed that both the judge and the recorder were correct in leaving the possibility of conviction of the section 47 offences to the jury in the

Pitney Bowes is no stranger to innovation.

After all, we invented the world's generated invoices and first postage meter.

Now we've developed a totally integrated electronic mail processing system that will transform the way your company handles its mail.

At its heart is the RMRS postage meter. With Remote Meter Re-Setting a simple telephone call to our Data Centre is all it takes to re-set your postage meter in seconds.

Which means your mail always goes out on time. And always looks thoroughly professional.

Another key component in the system is the Pitney Bowes electronic meter.

Not only does it operate on existing Pitney Bowes meter bases and handle postage selection up to one hundred pounds, it's also the first of its kind to be approved for the UK.

Link it to our electronic 'decision' scales and they will set the correct postage in the meter automatically.

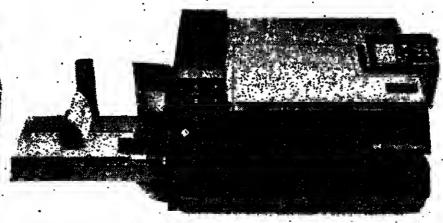

If your company is using a computer, you'll also appreciate the advantages of our Intelligent Inserting System. Quite simply, it processes your computerstatements, direct mail (including continuous forms) and handles programmed > selection of inserts.

It will certainly save you time and money. It may even help you generate better revenue and cash flow.

No matter how large or small your mailroom, if you want to set new standards of efficency, keep in touch with Pitney Bowes.

Dear Old Blighty Coliseum, Oldham

After Tishoo at Wyndham's a few years ago and now this, I am starting to get a taste for Brian Thompson's comedies. Apparently rambling and tempting impatience at the time, they are also touching and leave big issues fermenting enjoyably, if confusingly, in the mind afterwards. Dear Old Blighty takes place in a humsole survivor of the Kaiser's war is about to transfer control to one of the 1939-45 generation, recently and reluctantly given membership. The incoming president is a town councillor line Gumm's vlub bar set stands in an urban wasteland of bricks from demolished streets and a multi-storey carpark, establishing the Blighty Club as a symbol for a nation facing drastic overhaul as well as one aspect of that nation's consciousness. in the foreground however are unexpected figures: the regular barmaid (middle-aged and attractive) and her daughter, both married to dreary men, finding love elsewhere but uncertain about taking the plunge. Young June's angry description of comfortable suburban futility, blazingly delivered by Jane Hollowood and implicitly contrasted with the veterans' sense of identity and values, is one of the points where the planes of meaning connect. But she also represents youth revulsion from war memories, especially the former PoW (a beautifully controlled performance by Leonard Fenton) hoarding chests of docu-ments on his Japanese tormentor. Even her cuddly boyfriend (Andrew Hay), an electrician on hand for the modernizations, believes in preventing future wars by forgetting past ones.

Taking incomprehension to the limit, skinheads vandalize the place and destroy the Japanese archive. For the archivist it proves to be a equally contented, leaves club widower (Richard Steele) who has outgrown his past as well. Susan Uebel's performance, like Pat Trueman's production as a whole, is warm and benefits from being firmly rooted in a very real world where a woman setting up bouse with her lover worries about being seen with him in a cheap skirt and wonders if she can still make

Opera and Scotland are going to have tn make up their minds about each other. After three years of lurching from crisis to crisis Scotland's national opera company is on the brink. The issues have finally crystallized around the central question of local service versus national prestige. If the argument goes one way the general adminis-trator will resign, if it goes the other substantial new money will have to be

The present phase of Scottish Opera's problems began in the summer of 1980 when the company slumped into a deficit of £440,000 and a recovery programme was launched. All seemed to be progress-ing well and a new general adminis-trator – John Cox, who had been director of productions at Glynde-hourne for 10 years - was appointed. He took up his post in July last year and by October he had discovered vildly off course. Scottish Opera was

To go local – or to go out of business?

Cox cut back as much as he could. but it was too late, and the feared deficit materialized. Only with the aid of a grant of £235,000 from Glasgow, and another £400,000 squeezed out of the Government's f.5m nne-off payment for the arts earlier this year, could the company survive. But that still left them well in

This year Cox has restricted the company to six performances each of eight operas at their Glasgow base -the 1,500-seat Theatre Royal - and some English touring, the marginal costs of which are covered by the Arts heading for a deficit of about Council in London. What is all too 2800,000 at the end of the year.

Council in London. What is all too nhviously missing is any Scottish nhviously missing is any Scottish touring, which is the key role for the company laid down by the Scottish Arts Conneil.

> The SAC's subsidy comes to just under £2.4m this year, representing 21 per cent of the council's total budget. It has no intention of letting that percentage rise. Meanwhile local authority money has dwindled from £170,000 four years ago to £90,000 last year. On these figures Scottish Opera has a choice it can restrict itself to 38 performances in Glasgow next year, with some English touring, or it can topr in Scotland with rathlessly restricted production costs.

For Cox the latter is not a serious niternative. It would mean the end of the company as a distinguished representative of the nation and a serious world-ranking production bouse. He would resign on the basis

The SAC has threatened to cut the subsidy completely unless the com-pany knuckles under and becomes a local, low-cost tourer. At present these are the extreme parameters of the negotiation, but Cox has forced the pace by saying, in the company's yearbook, that this season may be the last, and by dumping the company's detailed proposals for next season in that it is not the sort of company he was contracted to run.

The pressure could yet be eased if n meeting with George Younger, the Secretary of State for Scotland, later this month produces anything. Hippes are reasonably high as it was an appeal to Younger which brought the 2400,000 earlier in the year. And both sides are agreed that more money is what is required.

But the wider significance of the crisis lies first in the questions it raises about the regional policy on arts subsidy. As the result of n longstanding annualy Welsh National Opera receives £1m more in susbsidy than Scottish Opera, because h necepts London money nn a base butions to production costs - rather than a marginal-cost arrangement for its productions in England. The SAC rejected this some years ago, wishing to retain its autonomy as the sole funder of the Scottish arts companies. Scottish Opera is now paying the price of the SAC's national pride and is frankly more inclined to support the proposals of the Priestler Scrutiny on the English national companies - that funds should come direct from central government. Secondly, of course, it raises the whole question of the regional commitment to this most expensive of all the arts. Rombles have been heard from the SAC about what mile something as expangant and nonindigenous as opera has in its country. There is, of course, no short answer, which leaves us back where we started: opera and Scotland are going to have to make up their minds about each other.

Even in the version recut and dubbed by the producers it was a vivid if eccentric work, an allegory of the Fall, loosely based on a novel by James Hadley Chasc and set in Venice. The badger is an amiable fellow and has no known enemies, they told us in BBC2's Open Space last night with rather a courtroom ring. The badger's business and diet are helpful 19 the countryside and he would be quile happy left to his own devices. Parliament acknowledged his good citizenship in 1973, passing the Badger Act, meant to stop people badgering him and turning him into him and turning him into shaving brushes or sporrans.

Non-Scots and users of electric razors could therefore watch last night's film, by the 22-year-old Graham Horder, who spent 40 nights outside badger sets to make his The Badgers of Gwent, with a clear conscience.

Gwent was the first place to form a group to protect badgers and Iry to ensure that the Badger Act was enforced. A network of similar groups is now established round country. Despite this, the badger is still baited - a horrifying process - and ill-used though this will hopefully decline as the groups get on with their monitoring, mapping and numbering of the badgers' addresses.

Apart from ourselves, the badger is Britain's largest carnivore. If we are unkind to it we also lack consideration to each other. Watching G. F. Newman's The Nation's Health on Channel 4 last night, the plight of the badger receded swiftly.

Mr Newman's play was called Decline. Last week's was Acute and we can look forward 10 Chronic and Collapse in the next weeks. His thesis, in a nushell, is that medicine and medical people have become too technological, leaving healing and humanity behind. His secker after unpalatable truth in this series is Dr Jessie Marvill. who is to descend the hill of disillusion in all four plays.

The series is already far into "overkill". Mr Newman who, I understand, does not have a doctor and might, after this, not find one easily, is putting all his had eggs in one basket to the detriment, of a message that might otherwise be salutary. The series is likely to hold only masochistic doctdis and appre-hensive medical students for the duration of its run.

Odd goings on at the residence of the Indian High Commissioner, Dr. V. A. What goes through the pretty head of a model like Lorraine Coe when she is being photographed in poses of exquisite catatonia on a tropical beach by David Bailey? I found out at the launch of Bailey's 1984 Lambs Navy Rum calendar. In the case of Miss Coe, who appears clad mostly m blank looks, it is not a matter of wondering whether the neighbours are feeding the cat in her absence but how to stop the dog eating. One of Bailey's shots, in which Miss Coe's blankness is complemented by a necklace of dead tuna, was complicated by a Tahitian bound's insatiable interest in the fish, "I was a bit worried it was going to bite my ankle off." said Miss Coe. Neither she nor Bailey knew which month the picture represented on the calendar. "Dunno," said photographer. "It's Pisces."

Why the Democratic presidential front-runners are worried by the lesser lights

The battle of the images

Walter Mondale last week had his "dream week", winning in quick succession the massive endorsement of the AFL-CIO union organization and the National Education Association, then going on to trounce his Democratie rivals for the presidential nomination in a beavily-con-tested party "straw poll" in Maine.

Now it is the turn of his chief rival for the Democratic nomination, Senator John Glenn, to enjoy a spate of favourable media attention. On Sunday the film The Right Stuff. which portrays the former astronaut Glenn in a less prissy, more beroic light than in the Tom Wolfe novel on which the movie is based, had its glittering premiere at the Kennedy Center in Washington.

The previous evening the Glenn nomination campaign is to launch itself with a five-minute televised political commercial spectacular on prime time over the CBS network. The Glenn campaign staff insist that the launch date of The Right Stuff and the film's flattering portrayal of their candidate are entirely coiocidental with Glenn's own presidential ambitions. But they nevertheless coocede that the fits in admirably with their overall strategy, which is to build up a tidal wave of popular support for Gleon, based on his fame as an astronaut and his reputation as an Eisenhower-style national hero.

Mondale's latest political successes and Glenn's impending media blitz (which has already begun with a cover story about The Right Stuff in Newsweek and extensive coverage in Time) mark the beginning of a more combative stage in the race to gain the Democratic Party's nomination to run for President in 1984. The seven declared candidates with an eighth. The Rev Jesse Jackson, expected to declare himself shortly - are now beginning to buri at each other the sorts of crivcisms usually reserved for their common enemy, President Reagan. Mondale, noung Glenn's bawkish stand on defence and his past support for the President's tax-cut legislation, has accused the Ohio senator of being a lukewarm Democrat, too conservative to appeal to "real Democrats". Glenn has responded by accusing Mondale of pandering to and becoming the captive of special interest groups. "Mondale runs the risk of being labelled 'union-owned and-operated'," a member of his staff commented.

Glenn has also continued to hammer away at the theme that the polls persist in showing him as the Democratic challenger President Reagan fears most.

The inteosity the Democratic race has taken on at this early stage with still more than 400 days to go before the election takes place - bas largely been caused by the demands of next year's calendar for primaries and state caucuses, which will select the 3.931 delegates to attend the Democratic Party convention in San Francisco in July.

Because so many key primaries and caucuses are being held early next year, 45 per cent of the April 1. This means that it is vital for candidates to make a big impact carly on, particularly if they are to pick up the political "megabucks" which a candidate needs if be has any chance of winning.

weeks" neatly underline the different strategies which the two leading candidates are adopting in their attempts to be first past the post. Mondale, the more experienced and better organized of the two, has set out to capture the support of the party barons and special interest groups whose support will be so vital at next year's convention. Hence his assiduous wooing of Labour leaders, teachers, feminists, blacks and Hispanics. He now hopes that endorsement by the AFL-CIO will be followed by open backing from influential state and city Democratie bosses, such as Mario Ciomo in New York, who have so far been reluctant to join his band wagon.

Glenn's strategy, on the other hand, has been to ignore the party's special-interest components and appeal over their heads to the rankand-file Democrats and to the uncommitted

"Mondale's strategy is ... an organizational, constituency-based strategy", said Greg Schneiders, Glenn's press secretary. "In the Glenn campaign, we place a premium on communication that goes directly to the voters. While not gnoring organization, it is possible that organization will turn out to be like sand castles on the beach when a tidal wave comes in."

At present Mondale is well ahead the fund-raising stakes. But Glenn showing be can attract broad financial support, while outsiders, like Senator Alan Cranston, have been able to shower hundreds of thousands of dollars on their campaigns at this early stage; to ensure a good enough showing in "straw polls" and to keep alive the notion that this is not just a twohorse race. The Glenn campaign staff bope that the sand castles, such as Mondale's endorsement by the 14 million strong AFL-CIO, will be swept away by the forthcoming Glenn publicity wave. Glenn's attitude is that the AFL-CIO vote represented only the views of union bosses and that he enjoys broad support among ordinary blue collar workers, which will translate itself into a groundswell of support in time for next July's convention.

Mondale is worried that Glenn is winning the "image" battle; that the former astronaut has effortlessly managed to retain his high ratings simply by being himself and by portraying himself as a national Mondale tends to be viewed as a politician" rather than a leader, an old-style Democrat given to "irres ponsibility in money matters and mushiness in national security issues", as columnist Joseph Kraft recently remarked. His past associ-ations with President Carter lead many to believe that he is incapable of beating President Reagan.

Moodale has tried 10 overcome his "softie" image with some tough speech- making and by showing that be is as much a product of middle America as Glenn or Reagan. His main concern in the weeks ahead is the challenge posed to his candidacy by other candidates, which could crode his popular base, Principal among these is Sen. Cranston, who gave Mondale a bloody nose in a "straw poll" in Winsconsin in the summer.

George McGovern and the Rev Jackson, if he runs, could also steal valuable support away from Mondale. Although most political ob-servers have written McGovern off as a lost cause, be performed surprisingly well in a recent opinion poll which showed he still appealed to left-wing Democrats.

Glenn's principal weakness at this stage, apart from his poor organiza-tion, is bis ability to drop clangers which either alienate potential supporters or else show him to be uncertain of himself under pressure.

For the moment, bowever, the race between the two front-runners remains too close to call and remembering the Democratic Party's recent propensity for selecting an ontsider - no one is yet completely writing off the others as

Don't be gung-ho about Hongkong

"A quarrel between Hongkong and Canton is like a quarrel between the month and the belly. If they fight, the whole body suffers. Thus General Li Chai-sum, Governor of Canton province, balf a century ago. The general, a sensible man, might have added that in any row between Britain and China, Hongkong would suffer most. We may be in for a difficult time on Hongkong. The Chinese sometimes seem to be concerned about. the past rather than the future. They should worry more about today's Hongkong dollar, and less about yesterday's treaties. It does no one any good to talk (or rather shout) down the dollar, or to hold up the British as ravenous neo-colonials. There are plenty of bome-grown criues, too. Mrs Thatcher, we were told, was rash to raise the issue in the first place. Should she bave just iet Hongkong drift towards the rocks in the same way as our economy did before she took over? Others urge ber to slap down a demand for an extension of the lease, and be damned. We would not be damned; Hongkong would. And finally she is encouraged to answer the Chinese back. How? By spelling out the message that China's own compatriots in Hongkong do not want ber to run their lives or economy? Would that belp the colony? You do not need to be Chinese to understand "face".

Now that the negotiations are soon to be resumed, it is a good time for coolness and charity. The first thing to be clear about is the economic interests of each party. These are not quite what they seem. To start with, let us for two reasons go a little easy on the argument that Hongkong is indispensable to China.

China would not lose all its foreign exchange income if it were rash enough to try to run Hongkong itself. The figure of 40 per cent of itsforeign exchange is rossed about The real figure is probably closer to 30 per cent - still a lot, but some of this comes form reexports and would continue to flow to China, even in the worst case.

But in China, economic considerations do not always predominate. I spent several years there during the Cultural Revolution, and watched extreme politics and chanvinism overrule common sense and selfinterest. The consequences were ugly, and expensive. I also once took part in some tense, secret negotiations (they were later leaked) in an obscure restaurant in Hongkong-where we and the mainland representatives grappled with the problems of the overflow of the Cultural Revolution into the colony, during which more than 50-people had died. Our view was that while we ran the place, law and order would apply to "Maoists" as much as to anyone else.

The Chinese got the point then. But that experience, and some prettyhair-raising events along the frontier at the time, left me with a sober impression of the delicacy of the balance on which the territory rests. We now have a new China, but a Ching in which old demons and resentments still slumber - as shown by the tone of Peking's recent pronouncements on Hongkong. These people feel strongly that part of their territory has been alienated by force, and are tempted to take it

The Chinese will not, I bope, make the mistake of supposing that revenue from it, although the balance of payments is in our favour. (A sensible settlement could leave us with most of our commercial interests intact.) Nor, I assume, do we wish to continue to run it to perpetuate imperial glory. Our chief concerns are thus moral and pragmatic: to do the best we can for Hongkong and its citizens.

In diplomacy, as in everyday life, the key question is often not what you want, but how you are going to get it. An uncompromising demand for an extension of the present lease would liquidate both empire and prosperity in short order. I doubt if anyone wants that. Those who assume that it is possible or prudent to negotiate in this way show no awareness of the simple power relationships; no understanding of Chinese national pride - the most. powerful and volatile element in the whole equation; and so no practical. concern for the welfare of the Prosperity depends on a Sino-British entente about the future. I am convinced a settlement can be achieved, though it will not be forced out of the Chinese in adversarial negotiations. The main elements should be a continued British presence in some form; a measure of autonomy: and the firmest guarantees available. The reaties are already a block to progress, and must inevitably at some stage be tacitly put aside.

We must think particularly carefully about our own role. The last thing we need is another case of responsibility without power. Is our desire to continue administering the territory so strong that we wish to do so even if we have no real control over events?

Look at the uphcavals, the power struggles and the drastic reversals of policy in China over the last 15 years, and the West's inability to predict these sea changes. Is it necessarily in our interests, or in those of Hongkong, to seek blindly to perpetuate into the future arrangemeous which have worked well, in different circumstances, in the past? It is impossible to imagine a large and stabilizing British presence (eg., in the Civil Service) short of complete responsibility. In the long run, this could offer a lower profile and more security for Hongkong. and less temptation for Peking to step in. Anyone wishing to posture on the sidelines of the negotiations should remember that tough talk alone, like "concern", never belped anybody. However tempted we are to call China's bluff, let us remember that we are dealing with not only an economy, but (as Mr Levio reminded us) with more than five million people and a distinct culture. Having once studied Tang poetry with a Hongkong Chinese tutor in an aromatic tenement near Wanchai, with the noise of the mah-jong games drifting through open windows, I am keenly aware of this aspect of our responsibility. The future of these splendid and resourceful people will not be secured by gladiatorial gestures, but only by calm, firm and persistent Above all, don't let's behead the messenger because we don't like the message. The Franks Report shows where that can lead. The author is Conservotive MP for Buckingham.

We ken The Word the noo

The Word of the Lord is one of the two principal spirits that fuel Scotsmen. It has often been more potent, and sometimes more viol-ent, than whisky. There is a popular view north of the border that God is a Scot, something like a white-bearded Wee Free minister, looking down in his infinite maircy on the miserable sinners howling in eternal flames, and telling them sternly. Well, ye ken the noo". No doubt God speaks Scots. But until today there has been no translation of his Word in the Scottish tongue. Well, there is the noo, with the publication of The New Testament in Scots for the William Laughton Lorimer

Trust by Southside, publishers, of Edinburgh. It is a majestic work of scholarship, filial piety, and charming humour, W. L. Lorimer was born at Strathmartine, near Dundee, in 1885, and became a classical scholar in the notable stables of Fettes and Trinity College, Oxford. His favourite reminiscence from Trinity was that one day a globe-trotting American asked the college porter, a Roman Catholic, "Whom do those statues on the tower represent? "Bless you, sir," the porter replied, "the 'oly Trinity". "But", said the puzzled American, "there are four of them". "That's right, sir", the porter assured him: "three persons - and Lorimer became one of the finest classical scholars in his country; he spent his life teaching Greek and Latin at St Andrew's, then at University College, Dundee, and finally as Professor of Greek at St Andrew's.

As a boy of nine he had started to. collect Scots words and phrases spoken by three aged and impoverisbed women pensioners who inhabited the cottar-houses behind his father's manse. He never forgot how much idiomatic Scots differed from English spoken with a Scots accent. And he devoted the last 10 years of of his life to his translation of the New Testament. His studies had persuaded him that the New Testament isna written in Standard Diana Geddes and that "Jesus spakna Standard

Aramaic - for ordnar, oniegate - but plain, braid Galilee". It was probably composed by at least 12 different writers, ranging from Paul to the author of Revelations, and possesses no such uniform style as most of its translators have imposed on it. Lorimer accordingly refrained from using a uniform Standard Scots. Instead he took erudite care to differentiate the style in which he rendered each individual author's

It became a scholarly obsession to recreate dying Scots prose. He ransacked all available oral and literary linguistic sources; he was doing that anyway in his work for The Scottish National Dictionary. He consulted scores of learned scriptural commentaries, and scrutinized more than 180 other translations in more than 20 languages. It is one of the ironies of the Scottish class system that his mother had imposed the conflicting require-ments on her children that they must try to learn as many languages as possible, but must not themselves speak Scotch.

Today Lorimer's son publishes his father's testament in Scots with funds raised by public subscription.
I can see that it is tempting the de'il that lurks in the new technology of photocomposition, but, Gabriel Archangel of foreign tongues be with us, here is an example of a well-kent

Mou happie the puir at is hummle afore God for theirs is the Kingdom of heiven! Mou happie the dowff an dowle, for they will be comfortit! You happie the douce an cannie, Twenty-five years ago, the French drank 140 litres of wine per head of population a year. Today's figure is 80 litres. Consumption of beer and spirits has gone up during that period, but the main switch has been to soft drinks - and water. As living standards have risen, people are drinking less, but better.

The French family no longer automatically sits down to every meal with a litre of wine on the table. The ecological movement has

It is a myth to believe that you can buy a bottle labelled vin de table which is really surplus Chateau Margaux. Any AC wine produced above the quantity limits imposed for that vineyard in that particular year has to be thrown away or made into vinegar. It is illegal to sell it even as table wine. That rule is imposed to prevent vine growers "over-producing", which almost invariably results in a poorer quality wine. In practice, very little wine is ever wasted in this way.

While wine consumption has been falling in France and Italy, the two greatest wine-bibbing countries, it has been rising in most other western countries. In Britain, it has almost tripled over the past decade from 2.9 litres per head per year to nearly 8 litres - though still way behind the 80 litres in France, 70 in Italy, 50 in Switzerland, and 25 in West Germany.

The triumph of Juoe 9 should have been celebrated by the presentation of a clear idea of how the Government will use its renewed power, and where it will iovite the party and the country to follow it during the next five years. Yet since the election, both performance and the presentation of policy have been lacklustre and uncertain. Instead of being confidently on the advance, carrying public opinion with it, the Government has found itself on the defensive and it cannot be said that the conference, so far, has helped to restore its poise. The most valuable use that can be made of this conference is that it should serve as a warning that the Government cannot take anything for granted.

The unseemly public deployment of Mr Cecil Parkinson's unhappy personal problems has not helped the Government or the Conservative Party, to keep their minds oo their proper business, or to meet the public. with self confidence. By not resigning before he himself issued the statement which made his private difficulty public property, Mr Parkinson layed too much on his party and specifically too much oo the conference which was on the point of assembling at Blackpool. It is oot a question of measuring this unhappy episode against some precise scale of moral conduct, expressed in generalities, which infallibly and rigidly determines wheo and oo what grounds a minister in embarrassing personal circumstances should resign. It is rather a question of the political instinct which, io all the circumstances of a particular case, should make it possible to foresee wheo resignation is desirable because the consequeoces of ooo-resignation would be damaging to the Government and the party.

The unseemliness of the public attention which was inevitably focused oo Mr Parkin- ence is that debates oo particular son and his difficulties at social questions bring to the Blackpool was ooe such consequence. Another was the uncertainty about bow to respond to him or to refer to him. Ministers have had to sift their speeches for fear that some accideotal double meanings might produce embarrassment. The conference itself, for fear of seeming to criticise him, was moved to receive Mr Parkinsoo with an

This response of the cooference was understandable in a party which is always predisposed to unity and to respect for its leaders. The chivalry of the reception given to Mr Parkinsoo was, in one sense. touching. But the question why precisely they were cheering the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry quite so hard in itself expresses the essence of an unhappy episode which has not helped the Conservative Party to concentrate sufficiently on its proper business.

Doing so was, in any case, proving somewhat difficult. The general tiredness of ministers after the election and the fact that the Prime Minister was unwell before her eye operation, and was for a time naturally debilitated after it, did not help the Government to give a clear account of its intention for its second term. In particular, the Cabinet has shown signs of confusion in its approach to the public on the longer-term problem of public spending and an nncertainty of touch in handling the economies oecessary to stay within its cash targets for the coming year.

It has laid itself open to the charge that, having committed itself to the National Health Service before the election so enthusiastically, and having taken pride in employing more doctors and nurses than ever, it has since imposed manpower restrictions which cover doctors and nurses as well as administrators and ancillary workers. The charge that it is indifferent to the well-being of the Health Service is ooe that substantially lacks substance. The Government knows it must be committed to uphold the NHS and its standards and if it had had any doubt yesterday's debate at the Tory Conference oo the Health Service would bave removed

One of the more attractive aspects of a Conservative conferin the generalities of amateur politicians but from their personal experience of a particular social service - in this case as members of local authorities. doctors, nurses and voluntary workers. Any idea that the active Conservatives, let alone the millioos of Conservative voters, ovation that was excessive, even are less than committed to the

NHS on which they personally depend is absurd and Mr Norman Fowler rightly responded yesterday with a robust declaration of his own commitoverhang the long-term prospect for public spending as a whole in which the welfare services are so large a part. Mr Nigel Lawson has restated his own determination as Chancellor to cut taxes and has done so somewhat more uncompromisingly than some of his colleagues think wise. It is not simply a question of how far tax cutting is possible without public spending cuts which might affect standards of the welfare services. It is also now a question of whether the Treasury was or was not right in its assessment last year that without a very drastic curtailment of public spending taxes far from being cut, would actually have to rise. In the present scene, the questions of economy through structural change and through candle-end savings have become confused and so has the size of the ecocomies likely to be needed.

This uncertaioty is partly because ministers currently give the impression of working, acting and speaking in their separate departmental roles rather than collectively as strategists. With two exceptions, those who have spoken for the Government at Blackpool have added little to the sum of knowledge or to the party's sense of direction. The Home Secretary had something oew to say in announcing his decisions oo sterner penalties for violent crime, and they were well devised. Mr Norman Tebbit shows much clearer signs than other ministers of knowing where he is going to his handling of the unions and bow to get there. But other departmental ministers are plainly in oeed of inspiration and of the long view.

It is up to the Prime Minister today to begin the process of providing both. Not all her own judgments have lately been impeccable. But she is the leading politician of our time and she now oceds to facilitate the emergence of a broad-based leadership in the Cabinet which she is backed by politicians who can be their own men, capable of adventurous and flexible thinking. It is a moment when the Government needs a new sense of direction. Mrs Thatcher's speech today should do much to reveal bow far she appreciates the nature of the task before her.

EXOCETS IN THE GULF

If nothing else, the muchmooted delivery of five Super-Etendard fighter-bombers from overstretched in a trial of France to Iraq has succeeded in stamina with a larger and richer reminding the world that the enemy determined to fight to the Iran-Iraq war is still going on and is potentially a source of danger to many others beside the two protagonists.

The aircraft, according to no less an authority than President Saddam Husain himself, have still not arrived in Iraq. But they have, it seems, left the base at Landivisiau in Brittany where they had been kept until last week and where Iraqi pilots had been trained to fly and maintain them. According to some sources, they may be dismantled and sent by sea - presumably to Aoaba in Jordan, since Iran has effectively blockaded access to Iraq through the Persian Gulf since the war began. It is precisely io order to break that blockade that Iraq has sought to acquire the aircraft which, as Britain bas cause to remember, can be used to fire AM 39 Exocet missiles at seaborne targets, with devastating effect.

Indeed, had those missiles not been used to sink British ships in the South Atlantic last year, there would perhaps not be the excitement there is now about the possibility of their use in the Gulf. Exocets, it should be recalled, have been used already in the Iran-Iraq war. Iraq is believed to have had about a hundred of them in stock when the war began, and has fired them from Super-Freion helicopters both against tankers in the Gulf and against the city of Tehran. But they have not proved more than a nuisance to Iran, which - unlike Iraq - has been able to continue exporting oil through the Gulf and, largely for that reason; is now in a much more comfortable financial and economic position than its antagonist.

In the war of attrition which has developed, Iran now looks to have the longer wind. Iraq, which began the war three years anti-Western Muslim fundamenago looking for a quick victory against a foe apparently paralysed by revolutionary chaos, now finds its resources heavily death and willing, apparently, to make unlimited sacrifices in across the frontier, but the danger that Iraq will eventually collapse from sheer exhaustion, like Germany in 1918, is clearly real.

It is therefore not surprising that Iraq seeks by every means possible to break the stalemate. The Super-Etendards, which President Saddam now says will be delivered by the end of this month, have been presented as such a means. From them, Exocets can be fired with a much better chance of penetrating antiaircraft defences. With them, Iraq hopes to turn the tables on Iran by rendering unusable the Iranian oil terminal at Kharg Island - either by destroying the loading facilities at the terminal itself or by sinking supertankers on their way to it - or, at least, hopes by the threat of doing this to deter Iran from further attacks on Iraqi shipping and so to break the blockade. France is willing to help in this enterprise because she shares at least some of Iraq's desperation at the way the war is going. The French economic stake in Iraq believed to be close to eight billion dollars - is such that any outcome of the war involving a collapse of the Iraqi regime and repudiation of its debts is regarded in Paris as a disaster to be averted at almost any cost. But, the French argue, it is not just French economic interests that are at stake. An Iranian victory, and the establishment of a militant Shiite regime in Baghdad, would have incalculable effects throughout the region. At worst the entire Middle East oil supply could fall into the hands of fanatically talists. Other Western powers, while sharing this coocern, have grave doubts whether escalating the war in the Gulf can be the right way to meet it. They doubt the wisdom, let alone the legality, of every Iranian cockle-boat.)

riposte if Iraq did succeed in closing Kharg down altogether, which would be either to try and close the Straits of Hormuz, thereby cutting off all oil supplies from the Gulf, or to attack the oilfields of Iraq's Arab backers, notably Saudi Arabia, or both. Either of those acts would cause such grave disruption of the West's oil supplies that the United States would very probably have to intervene militarily to reverse the consequences. The world is not so short of crisis points and international tension that this scenario should be welcomed by:

With luck, things will not go that far. At present France is going through various diplomatic contortions to try and ensure that, even when-delivered, the Super-Etendards do not have to be used. But all these really amount to trying to browbeat Ayatollah Khomeini into accepting a compromise with a regime that he has sworn to destroy. Experience scarcely justifies any optimism about that enterprise.

helping Iraq to attack neutral shipping in the Gulf. They the process. The Iraqi army has also doubt whether the Superso far successfully withstood Etendards will in fact give Iraqi Iranian attempts to carry the war the capacity to cut off Iran's oil exports. Iran's airforce, even though hampered by lack of key parts for its F14s and Phantoms, is still not to be written off completely; and even if the international supertankers were frightened away from Kharg Island, there is the possibility that they could be loaded at Sirri, near the mouth of the Gulf --thought to be out of Super-Etendard range from Iraqi air-fields - with small Iranian tankers running the gauntlet between there and Kharg. (Iraq is unlikely to have an Exocet for Ironically enough that is what France's allies hope rather than fear, for they would regard it as preferable to the likely Iranian

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Hongkong rights and freedoms

From Mr John Walden Sir, The letters from Sir William Keswick (October 1) and Mr Jack Perry (October 11) about Hong-kong's future reflect a point of view rather widely held amonest those who trade into Hongkong and China but actually live somewhere else. This is that all that is needed to keep Johnny Chinaman happy is to keep the coins jingling in his pocket.

Of course, everyone likes to make a quick hnck, and Sir William's "British merchant adventurers and nimble-witted Chinese" are no different. But to keep harping on maintaining Hongkong's prosperity and stability as if money and civil order were the only things that they care about is seriously to misjudge Hongkong people's concerns about their long-term future.

For a full year spokesmen of the Chinese, British and Hongkong governments have been publicly avowing their determination to maintain Hongkong's prosperity and stability up to and beyond 1997. Like Mr Jack Perry, most Hongkong people probably think that the Chinese can do it, even without British help. Yet they are still deeply apprehensive about 1997.

In fact, it seems to me that it is not the uncertainty about a prosper-ous and stable future that is causing confidence, money and people to desert Hongkong. It is a feeling of certainty, growing day by day in people's minds, that in 1997, or even before, authoritarian British colonial rule is going to be replaced by authoritarian Chinese Communist rule

Hongkong people well know which they prefer, because more than a million of them have voluntarily left China to live in Hongkong since 1949. Many have died, or risked death, to get there.

Neither the British nor the Chinese Government has yet made any explicit statement indicating the position they propose to take in regard to the freedoms and civil rights now enjoyed by Hongkong citizens. Furthermore, the Hong-kong Government has officially rejected a proposal that a referendum be eventually held to test the official assurances "that the out-come of the negotiations will be acceptable to the people of Hong-

Such obtuseness over a matter of such fundamental human importance cruelly serves to deepen Hongkong people's worries about their future and the future of their young children.

The vacuum in political leadership that an unimaginative attitude to public participation by the Hongkong Government in the running of Hongkong has helped to create has left the Hongkong people uniquely ill-prepared to help them-selves in this predicament. It has increased the weight of responsibility falling on the British Govern-ment to protect their interest in the current negotiations.

The most important of these is the inviolability of their freedoms. It is simply not good enough to say, as Mr Edward Heath did, when visiting Hongkong recently, that Hongkong people should have no say in their future. Neither he nor any law-abiding British citizen has ever spent a night wondering if the Special Branch will knock at his door. No one has the right to deny that same peace of mind to the citizens of Hongkong.

Yours sincerely. JOHN WALDEN, St John's College, University of Hong Kong, 82 Pokfulam Road, Hongkong. October 12.

Churches in decay

From the Reverend Brian H. King Sir. Clifford Longley's article of September 19 on the need for radical thinking for inner-city churches has wider implications.

This parish, too, suffers from "the tyranny of buildings". We have a very large 1930 church which, due to basic structure faults (known about since shortly after its completion), now needs a vast amount of money for repair and renovation.

The present congregation is anxious to solve the problem once and for all so that future worshippers will not be beset by the burden of a building they cannot afford to keep up. We should like to demolish the building and seek an alternative place of worship. However, our diocesan authorities tell us that without a church building the parish cannot exist and they would hesitate before licensing any other building.

Hanging over our heads also is the problem of insurance, for it is the Vicar and parochial church council who must foot the difference should public liability insurance cover be inadequate to meet the needs of a

Fairness in sentencing policy

From Mr Anthony Lester, QC Sir. Why should the murderer of a police officer or a prison officer normally expect to spend at least 20 years in prison whereas a police officer or a prison officer guilty of the murder of a prisoner will not normally face a 20-year minimum sentence?

Examples of murders in custody are happily very rare in this country. However, the equal protection of the law depends upon the principle that public servants and private persons are treated alike. Yours faithfully.

ANTHONY LESTER. 2 Hare Court, Temple, EC4. October 13.

From Mr Keith Simpson Sir. According to a report and a leading article in your paper today (October 12) it is proposed to alter the existing appeal system from the crown courts so as 10 permit the prosecution 10 appeal against the imposition of inadequate sentences to the Court of Appeal Criminal Division.

The object apparently is not to enable the Appeal Court to alter the sentence in Question, but merely to give it the opportunity to pro-nounce, if it so wishes, on the inadequacy of that sentence and to give guidance on the appropriate sentence for the particular type of crime for subsequent instances of

Such guidance is already given

From Ms Dora Belford and others Sir, In the course of our work as criminal lawyers we have experi-enced a serious failing in the workings of the Criminal Justice Act 1982. From Air-Vice Marshal Sir Brian

Sir. In reporting the Air Transport Users' Committee's proposals for a new system of flexible air fares (September 30) your Transport Editor added that it saw this "as a step towards deregulation of domestic air services". In fact, we see it as part of an alternative "liberalisation" process which, we believe, is far better suited to the British air passengers' needs than the type of deregulation introduced in the USA.

The AUC fears that a complete free-for-all, with any airline able to fly on any route at any fare it chose, might be a step towards a British Airways monopoly. BA already flies half the domestic passengers in this country, is six times the size of the higgest independent airline, and earns the hulk - 90 per cent - of its revenue from overseas routes, which will continue to be protected from unlimited competition.

Given this power base, whether or not it is privatised, it could easily undercut any competitor in Britain; putting Concorde on the shuttle routes, a stunt which trebled the fuel

Pricing gas

From Mr W. G. Jewers

Sir, Sir Ian Morrow (October 5) suggests that the British Gas Corporation's achievement in pay-ing off loans and being for all practical purposes debt-free is the result of a high-selling price policy. This is not so. The repayment of some £2bn of debt between 1973 and 1980, the majority of which was the cost of converting the country to natural gas, reflects the benefits resulting from that investment. However, with the high real cost of interest, which unfortunately has been and is continuing to be such a drain oo business finance, our costs, after allowing for the effect of interest, would now be higher if the deht had not been redeemed and the burden of the deht would still be

This can be illustrated by comparing 1976/77, when the corporation's interest payments approached £200m and 1982/83. where interest provided a source of income after tax of £29m.

Domestic gas prices in this country are well below those almost anywhere else on the Continent and industrial gas prices compare very favourably with any Contineotal prices. At the same time we are doing all we can to reduce our nongas costs, bearing in mind the higher prices we have to face for new gas supplies. This can be seen from the 1982/83 results, where the corporation exceeded the Government's performance target of a 5 per cent reduction in real terms in net trading costs in 1982/83 compared with All this hardly suggests an quite often and if this is all that is to be achieved it will merely serve to increase the existing heavy burden on the Appeal Court for no perceptible benefit to the public.

The only justification for creating extra work of this sort would be to allow the Appeal Court to alter an existing sentence where it is plainly too lenient, just as it can now if the sentence is too severe.

I can see no logic in a which permits a dissatisfied defendant to appeal and obtain a review of sentence by the higher court, but denies a similar right to a dissatisfied public whom the prosecution are presumed to represent. Yours faithfully. KEITH SIMPSON.

competition is likely to make the independent airlines wary of investing the capital pended to The more possibility of such ing the capital needed to expand their networks. Deregulation would thus have the opposite effect to that intended, and the passenger would be the true loser. Nor is this the only problem, since some form of regulation is stre to continue in allocating landing rights at Heathrow and other crowded airports, and we would not want this done simply by the power of the purse, either. The purse, in the end, is the passenger's. Our fares scheme would complement the policy of allowing increased but not unlimited competition on the main trunk routes by allowing true and prompt competition on pricing instead of needing every fares change to be approved by the Civil Aviation Authority. This is liberalisation and, we believe, the right way forward. Yours faithfully.

Polytechnic courses

From Mr Terence Miller

Sir, May I comment on your report (October 5) of the belated recognition by HMIs of the deficiencies including Marxist bias - of two sociology courses at the polytechnic of North London? "Bias" of various kinds in teaching at higher education level cannot, and in many cases should not, be avoided. "Attacks" on bias always produce anguished references to "academic freedom". The real iniquity lies in the marking of students' work in terms of adherence to, or departure from, the Marxist "party line".

During my time at PNL (1970-80) l tried to deal with this malaise, even, latterly, calling in all finals examination papers in sociology. recall engaging in a rather acid correspondence with some scandalized external examiners. (It is interesting to note that no one ever asked for the results of my investigation.)

The root of the trouble, and the reason for my inability to stop it, lies in the fact that among external examiners, and also among CNAA (Council for National Academic Awards) course-validating teams and particularly in the British Sociological Association - are to be found, in considerable strength, those to whom "correct" sociology is

I am delighted to read that the Secretary of State is to investigate. I hope that his range will not be limited to PNL. Certainly the CNAA should be included, but also those teacher-training institutions in which "sociology of education" and "sociology of knowledge" are, I believe, used as vehicles for Marxist indoctrination.

Test of worth in judging equality

From the Bishop of Southwark Sir. Over the past few years we have scen a mounting attack on the concept of equality, an attack which has been steadily supported by various contributors to the The Times. The latest examples of this have just appeared in the issue of October 11 in articles by David Hart and Roger Scruton.

In both cases the word equality is used in a general, undefined way as if we all knew and agreed on what it meant. At one point David Hart acknowledges that equality of opportunity is desirable, thereby qualifying his earlier statement that "equality is not only unohtainable but also undesirable". No mention is made of equality before the law.

The underlying assumption seems to be that equality means everyone earning exactly the same amount and adopting the same kind of lifestyle. Perhaps it does mean that for a few people. But it might help the debate forward if we could recognize that it does not mean anothing as simplistic as that for most of us, and that for Christians at least, equality is about people's equal worth in God's eyes.

Because of this, we stand in a relationship to one another which requires of us some recognition of that equal status. The argument centres on what will reinforce and deepen a sense of responsibility for each other, as opposed to what will undermine and destroy it.

In a human family we instinc-uvely recognize this. Children, however unequal their abilities. receive the same love and care from their parents and are made to feel their "equal" worth. It destroys family unity if the less able child is consistently treated less well and if there is no restraint on the able child's power to grab as much as possible for himself or herself.

In the Christian vocabulary we talk a lot about kolnonia, or feilowship, rather than equality, and I think it could be helpful to see equality as an aspect of this fellowship or "belonging-together" of the human race, rather than pursuing equality as a goal in itself. But this should not blind us to the recognition of our fundamental equality as human beings and the need to express that hy practical measures to ensure that our fundamental human needs are equally met, and that the rich do not have the "right" to get even richer while the poor get even poorer, whether in the world as a whole or in our own country. Council reform

From Mr Oliver Stutchbury

Sir. For at least the third time since the 1939-1945 War our central Government has put the cart before the horse in the matter of local government reform. The mess is not caused by overlapping and wasteful authorities, it is caused by the arbitrary and incomprehensible way in which local government is financed. To try and deal with the former before the latter is to go about the matter the wrong way round. As one who resigned from the GLC and the Labour Party in 1976 in order to campaign (together with some thirty others) in the 1977 GLC elections on an "Abolish the GLC" ticket, may I plead with the present Government not to go abead with its present proposals to abolish the GLC and metropolitan counties (to which end I am still totally committed) nntil it has made up its miod how local government is to be sensibly financed?

To go about its reform back to front will simply make the present muddle worse confounded. The only safe way forward is first of all, to get the provision of finance right.

Yours faithfully, OLIVER STUTCHBURY, The Mansion. Shingle Street, Woodbridge, East Suffolk

Key to understanding the cause of schizophrenia By Pearce Wright, Science Editor.

Schizophrenia is the comonest disease affecting longstay patients in psychiatric hospitals. Despite its preva-lence, little is known about the changes in the brain which produce the symptoms of this severe mental disease.

But recent medical research findings have given some indications of what to look for in the way of abnormal signs of brain chemistry and shape recorded by new diagnostic сашегаз.

One class of tranqillizing drugs is found to be especially affective in Schizophrenia and these compounds have one action in common: an ability to block the effects of dopamine in the brain. Dopamine is a neurotransmitter, a chemical released by a nerve cell to pass a signal to the next cell.

Examining brain tissue obtained from schlzophrenic patients after death, biochemists have searched for evidence These two approaches in the search for the basic abnormality in schizophrenia are of an overactivity from an excess of dopamine, but they totally different. However, a have so far been unable to find recent report published any changes which cannot be attributed to effects of the Nature manages to bridge the drugs given to these patients. On the other hand, some success has been obtained from an entirely different approach. Several psychologists and physiologists have results from a variety of different tests, including electro-encephalograph (EEG) measurements, of brain wave patterns which indicate that post mortem. the left half of the brain is working abnormally in the schizophrenic. Some epileptics have symp-

tons like schizophrenia and

EEG recordings show that im

most of these patients the abnormality lies in a region in the left half of the brain.

Dr Gavin Reynolds, from the Medical Research Council Brain Tissue Bank at Addenbrooke's Hospital Cambridge, has compared the amounts of dopamine in some regions of the left and right emispheres of brains taken from schizophrenic patients at which set a cracking pace last year, is again in the doldrums, with output down 3 per cent between the first and second quarters. This is particularly since construction provides a large number of jobs both directly and indirectly through fuelling demand for household goods and services.

Mr Nigel Lawson told Conservatives at Blackpool on Wednesday that he expected the includes the more prosperous service sector - to grow by up to 3 per cent this year compared with the 2 per cent prediction made in the Budget. There were no signs that the recovery was petering out, he said. But yesterday Sir Campbell

A consensus built on compromise

In the labyrinthine world of international trade negotiations, no corner is more obscure than export finance subsidies for capital goods and big projects. But those prepared to cut through the complexities of the new consensus can draw a sigh of relief that peace has broken out in one of the potentially most explosive and expensive areas of reverse protectionism. They will also find that, as with so many of these bureaucratic compromises, the potential for distortion and ultimately corruption on discretionary subsidies remains high.

If it was just a matter of governments trying clinch export deals offering un conomic credit terms, the matter might easily be resolved.

The problems really start because different interest rates prevail in different countries and, more importaut, on different currencies. In theory, the interest rate differentials (reflected in forward currency mar-kets) should match the likely future movements of currencies against each other. But as any exporter or currency dealer knows, real life is not like that.

Hence countries with high interest rate currencies, like France or Italy, argue that they are at a disadvantage in exporting, while countries with low-interest currencies (LIRCs), like Germany and Japan, cry cheat if high interest rates subsidized.

In practice is was the Americans who wanted to set minimum interest rates more in line with market rates to cut the public spending involved in sub-sidies. This argument threatened to lead to a complete breakdown after the old consensus ran out earlier this year.

The main point, therefore, is that a new consensus has been reached. removing the threat of a widly expensive and seifdefeating interest subsidy

When it comes to detail, as in all good international cancus races, everyone can claim to have won. The minimum interest rates for high-interest currencies have been cut, pleasing the French. But future rates are now to be regulated automatically by a system worked out by the OECD secretariat on the basis of changes in market rates on the IMF's basket of cur-

What this means is that, unless world interest rates fall meanwhile, the small cuts agreed to operate from October will be eleminated as soon as the first automatic adjustment is made in January, leading to progressive cuts in subsidies.

In any case, countries like France and Italy will still be able to offer large nominal interest rate subsidies.

But LIRC nations can still offer lower nominal

The advantage depends on the importers' willingness to take a risk on these currencies not rising to offset their interest rate advantage.

On the face of it, as one big British exporter found on clinching an Eastern block deal, there could be a big advantage in British exporters quoting in marks or yen especially when the importing developing country has a big mark of yen income to remove any currency risk.

As Japan and Germany are huge importers of primary commodities, this applies to many Third World countries. So we may well see a progressive switch to yen and marks as international trading currencies, something that will greatly annoy both these cautious countries.

US steps in after big run on bank

From Bailey Morris, Washington

The US Government has saved the First National Bank of Midland, in the largest oilproducing region of west Texas, after it reported a string of losses on evergy-related loans which triggered a big run on deposits beginning in late August. News surfaced yesterday that two federal agencies have lent about £700 (£466m) over a number of months to the bank to prevent it from soing under. Its failure would have been the largest in the US since the collapse of the Penn Square Bank of Oklahoma.

The Federal Desposit Insurance Corporation disclosed the bank's problems during a briefing at which it announced that it had made a loan of about $100m - one of the largest in its history - to First National Normally the agency, which was created after the Depression to insure individual deposits up to $100,000, makes a simultaneous acquisition announcement when it discloses a bank rescue programme but in this case it has been unable to find a buyer, a spokesman said.

The corporation was forced to come to the rescue after the Federal Reserve Board, cut off further assistance having reportedly lent up to &650m to the Texas bank.

Concern over the stability of banks, many of them quite large, has been growing for Sales at £401.7mm compare with £394.0mm in 1982. Sales are not recorded in 1983 for Venezuela which is now an associate. This change, together with the disposal and closure programme in diversifications, leaves sales value 4% ahead of 1982 for current business. This increase is attributed to OECD exchange movements. Volume was held overall. Prices have moved ahead in most parts of the world but the sharp effect of South American currency devaluations, when expressed in Sterling, represents a reduction in the value of our sales in South America equivalent to 3% of total Trading profits at £38.0mn were 21% up on 1982 £31.4mn with margins at 9% compared with 8%. OECD exchange rate movements added £3.1mn to profits.

Interest charges were down at £17.1mn compared with 1982 principally due to the improvement in gearing achieved in 1982.

Pre-tax profits of £33.8mn were 30% up on the first half of 1982. The results recorded in all regions, excepting South America which was down 25%, were considerably improved and continued the highly satisfactory trends that we foresee for our various activities. The severe down-turn in profits in South America, which included some loss of volume but not market share, reflects the action taken by the governments of the South American countries in their attempts to resolve their external payments difficulties through deflation of economic activity. The financial base of our businesses in the region is satisfactory under prevailing circumstances.

The rate of tax at 38% is lower than the provision for January/June 1982 and is the rate that we expect for the full year.

Profit before taxation in the current cost accounts reduces to £17.2mm (1982 pre-tax historical £26.0mm, pre-tax current cost £8.6mm).

Net debt compared with shareholders' and minority funds is expected to be 29% (1982 26%) at the end of 1983.

Extraordinary losses at £6.0mm are about half of the level that we anticipate for the year as a whole. These losses represent the costs which are being incurred during the period arising from reorganisation and closure programmes in the U.K. and Europe.

Trading conditions are encouraging in all regions other than South America. During periods of high inflation and devaluation South American profits have a much greater effect on our July/December results than they do in January/June. As these are down some 25%, overall Group results for the second half of 1983 will be lower than those for the second half of 1982. Nevertheless, if present trends in the U.K., U.S.A. and Australia continue, our overall performance for the year should be

An interim dividend of 1.5p per share (1982 1.4p) will be paid on 30th December, 1983, to ordinary shareholders on the register on 11th November, 1983.

Why gold relief may be short-lived

Gold put on about $4 yesterday in close a whisker above $399 an conce, thereby stilling fears that the crash towards $300 had begun, But the relief may be momentary. Not only are the chances of gold ending the year at $450 slim - a reasonable hope a few months ago-but the current level looks The weakness of the gold price can be seen in two ways, one by looking at the cucumstantial evidence, the other by looking at fundameotals.

On the first count, it must be argued forcibly that if the debt crisis, the IMF running short of cash, the endless feuding in Lebanoo and in the Gulf, and the shooting down of the Korean jet did oot push up gold, very little else will. Io the same vein, gold seems in have discounted the cootinuing strength of the dollar.

If one accepts that all such factors are broadly discounted, the present price must be largely supported by either funda-mentals or the time-hoooured fear of inflation. But the "fundamentals" of supply and demand offer small consolation because they have not essentially changed since last year. Jewelry demand has been firmer, but speculative demand is almost absent, and mine supply has not varied enough to explain price behav-

So what of inflation? Investors really began to buy gold in large quantities as an inflatioo hedge io 1978 when the price was under $200. Since then the average gold price has been $392, yet the inflation rate would have implied a price of

Morgan Greofell has built its reputation in the City for corporate finance largely in the position of aggressor. But in two to three weeks it could find itself belging to defend the independence of London Brick from an unwanted takeover bid. A series of crash meetings was held by Morgan Grenfell with the company this week to discuss defensive tactics after Hanson Trust admitted to having built up a 9.41 percent take up a 9.41 per cent stake. Reassuring ooises from Hanson about treating the stake as an investment have had little effect in countering City beliefs that bids will come from either Airtech: Mr Victor McMul- the top of its trading cycle.

The Pandora's Box that London Brick opened but can't close

Since the early 1970s, British brick deliveries have come down a third and may never recover to those former levels. London Brick's longer term position is worse than for other hrickmakers. Its main product is cheap flettoo bricks of which it has a monopoly because of its exclusive access to the belt of carbooiferous clay that runs io an arc from the Humber to Dorset - from which flettons are made.

A bid now would go against the conventional rules

These bricks accounting for Tollemache & Cobbold Brew- A bid launched onw would about 38 per cent of the total eries: Mr Peter Watsoo will be appear to go against all the market have been bit bardest by managing director from cooventional rules about oever the trend away from bricks to touching a company which is at other basic materials in building.

Flettons are used in vast building material and for cheap facings, but there is much better potential io the more expensive, high quality facing brick which househuyers like and architects specify. It is here that the clue to Haosoo's interest lies. Hanson owns Britain's second largest facing brickmaker, Butterley Building Products, a successful company which last year made pretax profits of nearly £6m.

Flettons may be at the bottom of the pile, marketed and made differently from other bricks, but it is accepted that they still determine the pricing structure for the cotire indutry.

The industrial and commercial logic of combining a fletton and non-fletton brickmaker is thus overwhelming. Hanson could move into

Loodoo Brick, and curb production to prevent any recurhousebuilding, the brick industry may be booming now. But the long-term trend is unappealing.

Since the early 1970s, British while commoo building bricks are also produced by companies other than Londoo Brick.

There will always be a market for flettons, both as n basic building material and for cheap outstripped supply and consequently prices and help the cotire industry, iocluding Butterley, to build up margins and achieve potentially dramatic improvements in profitability.

Long term production cut-backs at Londoo Brick would in turn allow Hansoo to realize substantial amounts of cash by selling the company's agricul-tural land bought originally for its clay deposits, but never likely to be used because of the falling market.

Hanson could move in and curb production

It is no wonder that Hanson bas not preached this logic publicly. The industry believes that it is the sort of logic that guided Loodoo Brick's takenver bid for Ibstock Johnsen, the largest non-fletton brickmakers.

But the Monopolies and Mergers Commissioo which dealt with that bid fails to deal adequately with this possibility. The report is remarkable only for its detailed breakdown of market shares io the industry and for exploring the precarious financial state of Ibstock Johnsen when it agreed to the merger last Christmas.

The report says: "We have been told by both Ibstock and Butterley that they do not follow a price leader to the facing brick market but price independently according to production costs and market costs." As one industry source says dismissively, "they would say that, wouldn't they?"

London Brick won clearance from toc commission to acquire Ibstock in August, but decided not to go ahead because it felt the company had become ton expensive.

It probably also feared provoking Hanson ioto action by attemptiog itself what Butterfly would dearly like to do, combine high-level fletton and non-fletton brick production

Mr David Taylor, an iovestment analyst with stock broker Scrimgeour, Kemp-Gee, says: ra's box when it hid for Ibstock by raising the possibility of structural changes io an indus-try which was thought barred from making them by the authorities. Now it cannot get it shut again." Ibstock, whose marketing operation has a high reputation in the industry, has appeared and disappeared like a Cheshire cat over the last six months. Redland, another big facing hrick manufacturer, made a bid for Ibstock, hus withdrew in the light of the commission reference. Instead it made o separate deal with Ibstock to take over its loss-making Netherlands offshoot.

Loodoo Brick may have dropped its bid for Ibstock but has not abandoned its ambition to become a force io the non-fletton area. It plans to do this by a combination of green field, development and buying up some of the smaller brick makers, which together account for as much as 45 per cent of the facing brick market.

Among these, the obvious candidate for a bid is Nottingham Brick. For that company, however, London Brick could face competiton form C H Beazer, an ambitious West Country property developing and contracting group which has been trying to build a presence in brick making.

It bought Westbrick in 1981 and Bowater Crossley's three brickworks oo Teeside last month. It also owns a 17 per cent stake in Blockley's, the Shropshire specialist brickmakers, and would almost certainly bid for it were the company not

Dithering over a flying start

Trade and Industry Ministers, notably Mr Norman Lamont, have been plunged further into a quandary by the decision of British Caledonian Airways, that bastlon of free enterprise in British airline business, to place firm orders for seven A320 European airbuses The aeroplane, it will be recalled, has yet to leave the drawing boards of the Airbus Industrie Consortium and will not do so until the thorny issue of financing is settled among the partners.

The French - in whose territory the consortium builds the Airbuses – have displayed a great willingness to offer a great winningness to other continuing support to a pan-European civil aerospace in-dustry and Air France and the domestic airline, Air Inter, have ordered a total of 35 A320s and taken options oo a British Airways, however, has for the momeot shunned the new aircraft, and Lufthansa of West Germay is dithering. And the governments of the two countries clearly stilt need convincing that the 150seat aircraft is worth the estimated development expenditure of £1,300m. The British share of the Airbus consortium is 20 per ceot, held by British Aero-space, and the final cost of British involvement could be as much as £400m depending opon what we make for the airliner.

The BCal decision appears to have given the A320 a much greater chance of a soccessful birth and there are those in BAe, frustrated at the loog delay in a funding decision from Whitehall, who believe that the Government is oow doty-bound to raid taxpayers'

Sir Adam Thompson, the chairman of BCal, was careful this week not to be drawn into the argument. He liked the plane, he said, and was confident it would be built, but making it was nothing to do woth him and it was not his job to persuade the Government to put up the money.

BCal admits that the choice of aircraft to replace its aging BAC 1-11s was "a very close race", with the proposed Boeing 737-300 and the McDonnel Douglas MD-90 coming in only just behind the

With all three zircraft offering similar qualities, why did BCal choose the one whose funding is the most insecure? Expansionist-minded Adam (he speot £3m this week buying Associated Communications Corporation's Jetsave charter tour company) says he wants BCal to be the catalyst to bring the new Airbus venture to fruition. He also believes that if the A320 does not fly, Airbus Industries will probably not produce another model and, like most of his counterparts, he dreads being American plane makers. In any case, if the A320 fails to materialize, the BCal order can be switched else-where, and the company will still have its refurbished I-IIs in use op to the end of the dependent upon one or two

The only other wholly oew aircraft in the 150-seater race is Boeing's 7-7 which, while it remains a "paper aeropiane". has already cost the Americans $50m to develop. Significantly, Boeing did not even attempt to sell the 7-7 to BCal during recent negotiations, but relied on the new version of the tried and trusty 737. Boeing, it seems, is not yet convinced that the 150-seater market is going to be big enough to justify the expenditure.

Meanwhile, the British Government has to ponder the same issues. With oil prices stabilising, will n new, highly fuel-efficient but highly expensive airliner be in great demand this decade? Airbus Industrie is yet to make a profit for its partners and is unlikely to do so until there is a significant ordering spree by the airlines. The Government is planning to reach a decision by the end of the year, but there is no oeed to hurry. More prudent would be to give priority to the International Aero Engines project, in which Rolls-Royce has a 30 per ceot stake, and would involve a similar £400m injection of launch aid.

Orders and options for the A320 oow total 80. Another big order, say for another 20 aircraft, could tip the balance favour of backing the project. Uotil then, ministers should sit on their hands.

WINSTON S. CHURCHILL

The proved, broading figure of Wieston Churchill flanked by Big Ben and other symbols in fine mosaics donabactes the shopping precinct in Dudley. It speaks for the town's resilicace as well.

he burden of history lies heavily on Dudley. But, beyond the old town. clustering at the foot of the mainly fourteenth century castle, which is conspicuous for miles on its hill above the chimneys and urban clutter, an industrial and small ecological renaissance is gathering pace. As the senior town of the Black Country, Dudley is population around 300,000. seeking to regain its preeminence and prosperity of a trial fortunes were founded on century ago with vigorous efforts in job creation. At the deposits of ironstone, limesame time, it is starting to stone, coal and fireclay. They repair 200 years of industrial ravages to its landscape, a task important to its self-esteem.

Oueen Victoria is said to have ordered her carriage hlinds to be lowered as the royal passed the industrial squalor of the town, from which the iroo sinews of her Empire were being shaped.

At about the same time, the prestigious Edinburgh Review, a note on the town, said: The very ground seems on fire. like the representations of Pandemooium in an old edition of Paradise Lost

A few forged fortunes from the blazing furnaces among the wretched homes of the poor, the pit banks and the engine houses. There was no discrimination when hovel or house sank into old mine workings. As many a local graveyard shows, cholera decimated at random.

A kinder, more recent evalu-ation said it was surprising that an industrial town such as Dudley had saved so much from the past, yet indicated so much for the future. This despite the stern face presented by the oumerous noo-conformist Black Country chapeis, which seem to glower and growl with disapproval at every turn. But, despite its harsh past. Dudley today has a good deal of charm and its people much warmth. This is also true of the towns that the Metropolitan Borough now embraces, such as Stourbridge. Halesowen and Brierley Hill, covering an area

Historically, Dudley's indusmineral resources. It had rich gave birth to iron-smelting and metal-working industries, notahly chain-making, and the cottage industry of nail-making. In direct cootrast, it is also the home of world-famous lead crystal manufacturers such as Royal Brierley, Stuart Crystal, Thomas Webb and Sons and Webb Corbett.

From metals to plastics

While considerable diversification has taken place since 1945, metal-based industries still play their part in Dudley's economy. There are more than 90 companies engaged in producing ferrous and nonferrous metals, and over 200 involved in various sectors of metal goods manufacturing.

Engineering is also important, with firms supplying the automotive industry with components, accessories and other equipment.

Inevitably, Dudley's economic and productive base has extended over the years far beyond metals and engineering. It now includes textiles, plastics, chemicals, electronics and a equipment In the West Midlands' economic crash, the borough has been devastated by unemploymeot, which has varied in the space of the last six months from 18.8 per cent to 17.45 per cent, representing a total of 28,281. The workforce of 91,816 males and 56,371 females comprises 53 per ceot skilled workers, 22 per cent semi and unskilled, 20 per cent pro-fessional and managerial, and 5 per cent others. Jock Bruce-Gardyne, writing in The Times on Sept. 14, said: The first priority oow is what to do about the most embattled of unassisted areas, the West Midlands."

Dudley is well aware of that particular problem. Its unemployment rate compares with 14 per cent in Scotland, which is an assisted area, but neither Dud-ley nor the West Midlands are included in that privileged company.

This leaves Dudley at a positive disadvantage, with only one financial carrot to tempt prospective developers and investors - its Enterprise Zone, which has been slow to take off in its two years' existence. Even allowing for that. Dudley was excluded in this year's inner city help and, together with Solihull, did not receive funds.

The Enterprise Zone cannot hope to compete with assisted area status and regional development grants. Dudley's Industrial Development Unit has had hundreds of enquiries from people cootemplating setting up But the crunch comes with financial assistance. Immediately it becomes apparent that the Enterprise Zone is the beginning and end of Dudley's financial inducements, an enquiry is often taken oo further. Keith Duesbury, Dudley's Industrial Information Officer, said that the appointment of John Butcher as Minister with special responsibilities for the region, the setting np of an innovation team at the Department of Industry regional office and additional funding under Investment Scheme must be a step forward. As assisted area status seems unlikely, so Dudley is looking elsewhere for renewed pros-perity. It is pressing for EEC

In Government support it did less well than others, v reflected low spending and high efficiency over a number of years. This year, it is receiving £107 per head of population in Block Grant, compared with an average for Metro districts of John Mulvehill, the council's chief executive, said: "It can be argued that Dudley is receiving less support for its services from national taxation through Government grants than it really deserves. The authority is working hard to ensure that the people of Dudley are treated more fairly."

Rolling out the bottles

The visitor, despite all this, will find it a cheerful town. Many of its public houses are a true reminder of more civilized days, and five independent small breweries still produce beers of charecter and distinc-tioo in the borough.

"Ma" Pardoe. Simpkiss, Batham and Holden are names that have earned devout respect for the quality of their ales, just as houses like the Vine, Brierley Hill, popularly known as the Bull and Bladder, or Mrs Pardoe's Old Swan at Netherton are places of enormous appeal. There is the Glynne Arms, or "Crooked House", which leans uphill and customers stagger Dudley's Eoterprise Zone (EZ) came into being in July 1981. For the next 10 years it will provide the premier industrial development opportunity for the area and, it is hoped, between 5,000 and 10,000 oew jobs. The zone originally ex-tended over 540 acres, and two months ago Lord Bellwin. Minister for Local Government announced an extension of 105 acres covering the redundent Round Oak Steelworks site.

stabilization, road improvements and the oew industrial estates, parts of which are operating with increasing suc-cess. The Round Oak closure, with the heavy loss of 1,300 jobs, was a profound shock to Dudley. The decision to incorporate the site and thus sweep away the legacy of the past was seen as an expression of faith in the ability of the people of the enterprise needed to restore its the region, which, it is said, is industrial fortunes. The EZ has oot had an easy passage but has survived some

West Midlands County Council, who have been among its fiercest critics. The general line of attack is that the spending of vast sums of taxpayer's mooey on giving not a recessionary one hut the decline of its traditional iodustry. It was said that the net increase of four jobs in the Dudley EZ io its first year had cost £909,000 in lost rates and had only attracted 26 firms employing 193 people.

But Roger Latham, economist and head of Dudley's Industrial Development Uoit, says the signs of progress were good. Employment had held steady and the 400 plus jobs created after two years had been through firms expanding or by new companies setting up. Jack Edmonds, leader of the council, has admitted that the zone has "been extremely slow to fire up". If it had not been for the efforts of developers such as Mucklows and Glynwed, operations would have been at a standstill. What is now seen as a crucial turning point came in April this year with the purchase of the Round Oak site by the galvanic Richardson twins from neighbouring Oldhury, men who are

Development Businessmen

The most difficult thing about relocating your business is locating the right people to help you. That's why Dudley is offering you the chance to talk straight to the people who matter - the Owners. They're developing our Enterprise Zone, and they're ready to meet the needs of your developing business.

Dudley has a colourful and busy market six days a week

There are three pedestrianized shopping areas and all the major multiples are presented together with smaller "character" shops. Stourbridge and Helesowen are the two other principle shopping areas and, as in Dudley, investments by the public and private sector has resulted in new developments with an increasing variety of high quality shops and stores.

A wide range of housing

Mr

Dudley can offer a wide range nf housing for sale or to rent, with styles ranging from the modern executive family house to the traditional country cottage. Housing developments include attractively landscaped modern family housing estates and charming older village communities situated in the borough or set in the surroundng countryside.

Schools are organized under the comprehensive system. More than 50,000 pupils are in full time education in primary. secondary schools and 35,000 people are involved in some form of further education.

Parks and Open spaces abound in the borough and one of the most fascinating is the Wren's Nest National nature reserve. It is internationally known as a classic geological exposure of the Upper Silurian limestones. The limestone was excavated and burnt in kilns for building and agriculture from the early seventeenth century and from the eighteenth century as a flux in ironmaking. It also yielded well over 300 species of fossil fauna. Quarrymen found trilobites in such quantities that it became known as the "Dudley Locust" and subsequently appeared on the town's

ECOLOGY

The first local nature reserve to be declared in the county of the West Midlands was in the Blackhrook Valley, Netherton, as a contribution to the European campaign for urban renaissance. Dudley has the highest acreage at 1,428 of descript land in the county and derelict land in the county and the valley renewal project is seen as being elosely linked with the adjacent enterprise zone in the local authority's efforts to pursue a balanced approach on regeneration and enhancement of the urban environment

Dudley has been designated as a derelier land clearance area and attracts a 100 per cent capital grant from the the Government. The main participants in the project which got underway in 1980, with the nature reserve declaration in September 1981, are the council. the Nature Conservancy Council and Landscape Inst tute.

At the outset, various agencies were looking for a suitable area with environmental problems which would benefit from the use of the best techniques for reclamation, improvements unusual lifting bridge from the Great Western Railway canal basin at Tipton.

Mining rights

It was at that point that one of the most contentious matters, still very much alive today. began to emerge. Rumours began circulating which have since become fact, that Grace, Countess of Dudley proposed to exercise her mining rights and open cast for coal around Doulton's Clayfield area of the valley. Her application for planning consent is now before the Labour-controlled county council in the face of considerable local opposition. One prime site that was indentifiable is the redundant Patent Shaft steelworks which closed in 1980 with the loss of 1,500 jobs. Last night a spokesman for Ohio-based Hoover told The "We have nothing further to add to the statement we have alredy made. We are continuing to explore the possibilities of making a bid for the remaining shares."

The parent group's decision to make a bid for its United Kingdom offshoot follows three years of heavy losses. However, there is a growing line of thought in the City that the worst of the group's troubles are over following large scale rationalization culminating in the closure of its Perryvale works in West London.

FOOTBALL: VICTORY EARNS REPRIEVE FOR THE PRESENT THAT COULD BE DEFEAT FOR THE FUTURE

A realistic view of Hungary's A realistic view performance came from Ron Greenwood, who commented, when commented that few teams won in someone mentioned that few teams hesides England had twice won in Hungay, that there would indeed be plenty more "if they keep playing like that". My opinion is that Rubson should take no notice whatever of this result in planning for the World Cup, whether or not some unexpected results find England scraping into the European finals.

When asked, at the beginning of their careers as international managers, whether the World Cup ought to be the main objective rather than the European Championship, both Greenwood and, last season, Robson denied that this was desirable, or possible, because a team meeded "results" for the benefit of public confidence.

Since an international learn novadays almost never plays

Success in system built for others

The presence of one of the minor bome nations in the finals "minor" bome nations in the illnais of a major cournament gives a particular pleasure. They become touchingly identifiable, a footballing version of the small man, surviving and then triumphing in a system built round conglomerates.

To recent years Scotland and Northern Ireland have captured the domestie imagination in this way. Now Wales are displaying the kind of qualities which, given a setting like next year's European Cham-pinnship finals, could find us all looking up that forgotten ancestor io Llangollen.

There is no doubt that if Wales maiotzin the form which carned maiotain the form which earned them their 5-0 wio over Romania in Wednesday's "friendly" at Wrexham they will reach France. Even if they lose in Bulgaria on November 16, victory in their last qualifying game, at home to Yugoslavia in December, would be enough.

Unless her game had regressed she seemed ndds-on favourite to beat Shelley Walpole yesterday and thus give the US an impregnable 6-0 lead in the 11 match contest, which eods today. The logic of all this was acceptable to everyone except Miss Walpole, a leggy and lissome lass who (in spite of her talent as a musician) has names suggesting origins in some library devoted to the giants of English literature. Stern, resolute and bold, Miss Walpole won 7-5, 6-3 in an hour and 35 minutes. Yes, Britain were in a 35 minutes. Yes, Britain were in a pickle. But she could still deal with a Gerken. She did so hy beating the sturdy Miss Gerken at her own game in what Americans sometimes

The two clubs have followed parallel paths in recent years. Both were relegated from the Alliance Premier League two seasons ago and, earlier this year, both appointed new, young managers after largely unsuccessful returns to the Southern League.

John Still succeeded Ernie Morgan as manager of Dartford five months ago. His only previous job as manager was at Leytonstone/li-ford where, in four years, he took the club into the Isthmian League premier division and led them to victory in several cup competitions. Sibson aims for Hagler

Tony Sibson is likely to be back in the ring at Wembley on November 22 for his first bout in Britain for 14 months. The Leicester middleweight's morale is high after his two-round victory over the Irish-American John Collins in Atlantic City, New Jersey on Saturday.

Nevertheless, with El Gran Senor, Ministerial, Rainbow Quest, Siberian Express and Superlative all standing their ground, today's feature race, which has been sponsored hy the William Hill Organization again, is just the sort to delight the panel of international handicappers as they begin to set about the task of drawing up the season's classifications.

El Gran Senor is thought to be the best of his age in Ireland this year, while Siberian Express is unquestionably one of the best in France. The cream of the English two-year-olds may not be on parade today, but Ministerial Rainbow Quest and Superlative are a trio capable of testing the strength of the French and Irish invaders.

El Gran Senor is my selection. No one has a better record in this race than his trainer. Vincent O'Brien, who has won it six times in the last 14 years, beginning with the legendary Nijinsky in 1969. In the intervening years Cellini, The Minstrel, Try My Best, Monte-verdi and Storm Bird were all successful standard bearers for the master of Ballydoyle. El Gran Senor, incidentally, is a full brother to Try My Best, who was a very good two-year-

On a line through both Masarika and Defecting Dancer, Siberian Express appears to have the measure of Superlative, who was runner-up in the Middle Park Stakes a fortnight ago.

Rainbow Quest impresses me much more as an individual than Ministerial and I also like the way that he goes about his business better, too. Ministerial has hung and shown signs of A gallop with an older horse greenness in all his three races, boosting winning pattern race whereas Rainbow Quest has

joy to watch on Salieri

By Michael Seely

Two "schoolmasters" captured the headlines at Newmarket yester-day. Both Salieri and Wiki Wike Wheels have been helping to educate the two-year-olds in Heary Cecil's and Charlie Nelson's stable, respectively. And they showed themselves to be still in fine trim with authoritive displays to the Bisquit Cognac Challenge Stakes and Fordham Handicap.

Salieri's victory was a joy 10 watch. There are few pleasures in racing comparable to that of watching Lester Piggott in confident mood. Backers of the 13-8 favourite must have been on good terms with themselves long before the maestro sent Salieri in pursuit of the leader, Noalcoholic. Quickening smoothly up the hill, Salieri won by two lengths with Sandhurst Prince 2 lengths with Sandhurst Prince a length away third.

Cecil was a relieved man afterwards. "Salieri developed an ahoess on his near-hind fool three days ago", the trainer said, "We had it cut out and then left the place open in the hope that it wouldn't become infected again. It was touch and on." and go."

Salieri has certainly found his form with a vengeance this autumn. Yesterday's victory followed a defeat of Royal Heroine in the Hungerford Stakes at Newbury and a win in the Diadem Stakes at Ascot. In between these two successes Charles St George's three-year-old had been unlucky to be narrowly beaten by Annie Edge at Donesster.

There is just a chance that he might go to Longchamp for the Prix de la Forêt, but otherwise he is finished for the season," the four times champion said. "Salieri will

Wild Wiki Wheels continued the fine run of success being enjoyed by Nelson's horses when capturing the seven-furloog handicap. Worlingworth and Michael Hills had tried to make every yard of the running but were caught in the dip by Pat Eddery and the winner. "He got a hit fed up rying to give weight to all those improving horses in the spring." Nelson said. "But he's taken on a new lease of life in blinkers. Let's hope its a good omen for Mahongany in the Rockfel Stakes."

The astute Yorkshire trainer, Steve Norton, followed up his victory with Abohoney at the October meeting by winning the Graham Ford Nursery with Mr Meeka. In the absence of the injured

Patrick Tambay, the 34-year-old French driver who has been given his marching orders by Farrari, recorded the fastest time in the first official practice yesterday for the South African Grand Prix which will deside the World Characian. will decide the World Champion ship.

He gave notice that he expects to go even faster during today's final practice and that he will go all out to win tomorrow's race - leaving Ferrrari wondering whether the Ferriari wondering whether the decision to sack him was the right

one. Tambay lapped the Kyalami circuit near here in a record time of one min 6.554sec and average speed of 221.991 kilometres an hour. Second fastest in Imin 6,792sec was Nelson Piquet of Brazil in a Brabham-BMW, followed by Alain Prost of France (Renault) and Rene Arnoux in the Ferrari.

The Canadians, knowing the size of the task which faces them against England at I wickenhaum tomorrow, have chosen their most mobile back row in the knowlewige that there will be a desperate amount of tackling and covering to be done, David Hands writes. Russell will play No 8, rather than flanker, and be will be joined by the improving Cvitak and Godziek, who did well against England in Vancouver last year.

Four of the Canadians will have Arnoux in the Ferrari.

Prost heads the championship table with 55 point, two ahead of Piquet, with Arnoux on 49. But Tambay made it clear yesterday he has no intention of belping Arnoux win the race and the ritle.

It was a bad day yesterday for Arnoux. He hiew the engine of his Ferrari midway through the practice session and then marshalls sent to help him managed in push the 600 kilogram car over his font.

Pembrokeshire's exciting victory over Japan on Wednesday will give a timely boost to rugby-in the area but, with a shortage of competitive opportunities, this is unlikely to be anything more than of a temporary nature. There is a county championship but that such a cup competition series will come as a superior to exists will come as a surprise to many, not least to quite a few Welshmen themselves. It ends up of the season's events. Pembrokeshire, with no senior club within its jurisdiction, have been champions for two successive seasons, 1980-81 and 1981-82, over the likes of Giamorgan and Monmouthshire, within whose bounds all the senior clubs reside Moomornshire, within whose bounds all the senior clubs reside, with the exception of Lianelli, and that perhaps sums up the influence the competition has in the traditional strongholds of Welsh rugby and the low regard with which it is beld by the players.

Although called upon, it is rare player to take part. That county rugby in Wales seems an anachron-ism is reinforced by the way they retain the old county names. What then is to be made, if anything, of county rugby in Wales? Trevor James, the Pembrokeshire coach, is unequivocal. Club rugby is so insular and limited in his part of the world that county representation is the only chance that local players have of competing against players from other parts of Wales. This can give rise to improved standards, It is sad for him, he believes, and for the players that they cannot continue to build on Wednesday's victory. Because county rugby is not taken seriously enough, he feels, the team will lose its motivation.

There is a feeling, even among the Welsh Rugby Union representatives that county rugby ought to be strengthened as a way of increasing interest in the weaker rugby areas. But the strength of Welsh rugby remains with the clubs and the clubs remains with the clubs and the clubs would object, as they have done so often in the past, that the counties should not make demands

Twelve months ago the Welsh Rugby Union investigative committee, in order to assess the county and the county of the cou contribution, asked them to submit future structure. No plan has been forthcoming as yet.

What is important that, whatever its position, it should be considered as an aid to Welsh rugby not a burden. After all there are those over the years who bave looked with a rather self-satisfied air at the perennial county versus club perennial county versus club dilemma which often plagues

Consolation

Christ's College, Brecon, had good wins under their behts against King's, Worcester, Dean Close, Wycliffe and Belmont Abbey (who themselves, had come close in defeating Cowley) when, full of confidence, they visited Sherborne. The result was a crushing defeat for the visitors by 48-7. The Christ's College side in general, and their coach, Mike Francis, in particular, came away from this match with the opinion that they had lost to an opinion that they had lost to an excellent team: "They were far too big and strong for us: I reckon that they are one of the best sides I've seen for years."

At least Lewis had the distinction and the BCCP has full confidence in his leadership qualities."

of scoring the only try that Sherborne have conceded this season. Another source of consolation for Christ's was that their talented captain and centre, Noble, was regarded by friend and foe alike as the best back on the field. Another side to enjoy an excellent start in the season are, Llandovery College. They have a largely new side with only one old colour, Lewis, still available, but there are several others with first-team experience. They have bearen Cowbridge, Haverfordwest and Rydal, but face their sternest test so far when they meet Millfield.

We managed something near parity in the set pieces, but Lancaster were far quicker and more imaginative from broken play. Stonyhurst have lost to Denstone Rossall and Lancaster and beaten Mount St Mary's. They are in s transitional phase, without out-standing players, but are hoping for better things before long. Over the Pennines, in Harrogate. Ashville registered a convincing victory over St Peter's, York, by 30-3 on a windy but dry day. Ashville were well served by their half backs, Search and Lister, son, of the secretary of Yorkshire County Cricket Club, Joe Lister, Gorman kicked a pensity for St Peter's. Anah (two). Bell. London and Lister scored tries for Ashville.

Motoring by Clifford Webb

Motorfair back for another year

it would be the first show and the last, it seemed that ther pundits were right when the show, intended to run alternate years with the International Motor Show in Birmingham's National Exhibition entre, failed to appear in 1979.

The problem was that the Society Mntor Manufacturers and Traders (SMMT) the industry's leading trade body and organizer of the Birmingham show, saw Motorfair as a direct threat to an event which was the society's bigget money-earner, Some motor manuacturers were openly critical of Earl's Court management, suggest-ing that they were bad losers not prepared to accept that switching the international show from its traditional home in Earl's Court to the more modern exhibition centre was a permanent move.

By 1981, however, the warring factions had settled their differences and the SMMT agreed to cooperate in running a Motorfair that year. They were given two seats on the organizing board from which they were able to ensure that member companies kept their involvement in Motorfair to a level that did not eave them unable to finance a stand at the following year's National Exhibition Centre show. In theory Motorfair is a dealers show at which motorists can negotiate new and second-car purchases on the spot, a departure from normal motor show practice. In fact more than £20m worth of business was clinched during the 1981 show and there were nearly 1981 show and there were nearly 230,000 paying visitors. Next week's event sees even more involvement by the manufacturers with little attempt to stay in the background. There are 162 principal stands occupying 20 per cent more space, in the weeks running up to the opening the manufacturers' publicity machines have been pouring out reams of handout material and their public relations staffs will be much in evidence at Wednesday's press preview.

So is Motorfair in any way a threat to the National Exhibition Centre? A lot of people in the motor Motorsair 83, which opens in Earl's Court, London, next Thrusday, has come a long way since 1977, when its first halting steps were so beset by controversy that many predicted to the provincial nightlife of Birmingham. I believe there is no question of a threat in the short term. Motorsair is a fraction of the size, occupying one inconvenient old hall, compared with Birmingham's seven custom-built halls, soon to be increased to eight. But in the long term there may be doubt. By maintaining a presence and demonstrating a need Earl's Court is keeping alive London's bopes that some day the British Motor Show will "come home", if not to Earl's Court then to the modern exhibiting centre Londoners still insist the capital should have.

New Citroen proves outstanding

Much has been written about the crucial role of Citroen's new BX range in the campaign now being waged by Peugent to give its subsidiary a new image with the motoring public. It has been discribed as the first Cirtoen designed for mass production, the first to have acceptable mainten-ance costs and the first to appeal to the all important fleet buyer.

Initial driving impressions indi-cated that it was also an attractive package for the family motorist looking for something a little different but still competitively priced, roomy and cheap to run. Such impressions are often mis-leading and all sorts of snags crop up with longer acquaintance.

I am happy to report that with one reservation the BX 16 TRS I tested recently is one of the most outstanding cars in the medium sector and real competition for the present leaders Sierra, Cavalier and the fast climbing Maestro.

The self-levelling suspension based on Citroen's well proven hydropneumatic system is unique in this fiercest of all cut price sectors of the market. Unlike some of the larger Citroens the BX does not "wallow" on fast bends and its constant beight ride is little affected by full loads.

It also scores over older Citroen models in braking. Citroen enthusiasts may like the instant "on-off" response of the power assisted extremely powerful.

The new all-alloy 1.6 litre engine filted transversely and driving the from wheels is one of the few which matches up to the Cavalier's outstanding 1.6 power unit. Both produce a little over 90hp and are very forgiving for the lazy driver who hangs on to top gear too lnng but at the same time rewarding for the fast driver prepared to stir the mixture as often as necessary.

It is also one of the most efficient

My main concern bowever is the heavy steering. It really is a handful to manocuvre in multi-storey car parks and unlike some cars which improve underway remains unduly heavy. I discussed the steering problem with Citroen and they vicious if nnt dangerous in bad weather. The discs-all-round power-assisted brakes on the BX still require a light touch but they can be applied with the degree of finesse which spells safety and yet remain in its class and capable of returning over 30 mpg in the hands of careful

Going foreign

lt is becoming clear that BL's car companies. Austin Rover and Jaguar, have designed their last new gear box. Prohibitive development and production costs have driven them to buy foreign. Jaguar has fitted a General Motors automatic box for several years and this week added the German Getrag fivespeed manual box for its new Austin Rover imports Volkswagen four and five speed boxes for its Maestro and two days ago revealed that a new automatic Maestro will also bave a VW box.

It has not been so open about the foreign invasion of its Rover saloons. Without any announce ment it has been importing GM automatics for its Rover range since the beginning of the year. The matter nnly came to light this week when it announced that the top-ofthe-range Rover Vitesse, previously available only in manual form, is to be sold with a GM automatic. Inquires brought to light the news that the switch from Borg Warner to GM began many months ago. The reason, according to Austin Rover, is purely cost, Borg Warner's volume has fallen to almost nothing, making it impossible for it to quote realistic prices, while GM's antomatic plant at Strasbourg grows even bigger.

Part one.? WAR (Radio 3, 8.05pm), Dr Shella Lawfor's talk, is a corrective to the popular view, born out of sentimentality mixed with gratitude. that Winston, the building saviour of the nation, was unchallenged as was leader. Three times, Dr Lawfor recalls, Churchill was prepared to suppress the military case in favour of the political - over aid to the Middle East, to Greece, and finally to the Soviet Union. As PM, he could not count on his cabinet and, as Tory leader, could not be sure of the loyalty of his back-bench. Churchill, Dr Lawtor insists, was not a general, but a politician - even if the politics were those about the conduct of war.

Detective 'only to identify' Waldorf

On the day of the shooting, Mr Ness and his officers were following Mr Waldorf's car, hoping that Miss Susie Stephens would lead him to the fugitive. Officers began to think Mr Waldorf might be their man.

He needed to know if Martin was in the car and "the only way to do that positively was for someone who knew him to go and look and tell me". Mr Waldorf's car was stuck in the jam and it seemed a good point 10 make the identification.

Constable Finch went for ward. The court was told that the previous September the detective had arrested Mr Martin in a struggle during which the criminal, disguised as a women, produced two guns and fought on despite being Asked what Constable Finch should have done at the car if he believed that someone was armed and he had given a warning, Mr Ness said: "He should have told them to stay where they were, not to move oot to do anything. That is what you would expect him to do. Make it clear he was a policeman ... and tell them what to do.

Asked if it was difficult for an officer to restrain a man hanging out of a car face down oo the road, Mr Ness said he thought it was not. He was asked to comment on alle-gations that Constable Finch had pistol-whipped Mr Waldorf as he lay wounded and how a man should be restrained. He replied that the police were trained to "incapacitate and hold a man with the minimum amount of force".

Under cross-examination by Mr Michael Corkery QC, for Constable Finch, Mr Ness agreed that but for the bravery of Constable Finch and other officers during Mr Martin's arrest last year, policemen might have been killed. Constable Finch's actions had been meritorious. During that arrest Constable Finch struck Martin across the face with his gun thinking that the man, though wounded, was still trying to

Mr Corkery read out the instructions for dealing with someone in a car and asked Mr Ness; "If one were dealing with Martin and he was armed, any police officer starting on that rigmarole might be dead before he got half way?" Mr Ness replied that it

Medal sold for record £16,000

By Geraldine Norman Sale Room Correspondent

The George Cross awarded to the hero who saved St Paul's September, 1940, was sold yesterday for £16,000. The previous record for the medal was £2,900.

The medal was awarded Lieutenant Robert Davies, of the Royal Engineers, who led the team that tackled a one-ton unexploded bomb that lodged 27ft below the surface of Dean's Yard during the Blitz.

Their work was made even more perilous by a fire and a broken gas main, whose fames several of his

Lieutenant Robert Davies and his George Cross.

The Imperial War Museum was the underbidder, but could not match Spink's bidding power, Spink said it had bought the medal for stock.

The firm did not wish it to leave the country and loped it might go somewhere suitable, such as St Paul's, the Mansion House or the London Maseum. The other highlight of the sale was a Victoria Cross group of medals awarded to Rear-with a left-wing voice. Mr Peter Archer, for Warley West, and Labour spokesman on trade, said last night: "It would be a very bad thing for British journalism if virtually the only paper which stated a different point of view from the rest of Fleet Street were to be in danger of losing that stance".

Sir Alex denied that the share flotation indicated any disenchantment with Fleet Street. He maintained that the move was a commercial decision that represented the best avenue for both Reed and MGN.

The sale was, he said, "a straightforward business decisioo". The MGN flotation is likely to produce up to £100m for Reed.

It was unclear whether the Reed management regarded the coming flotation of Remers, the news agency, and financial communications group, as an

Race, sex and packed house for Parkinson

A vivid day. But first a note about the new technology. In some editions yesterday, most painfully the one that reached Blackpool, one of my phrases in the fifth paragraph came out three times. Being someone brought up in the old technology of newspaper pro-duction, I am not familiar with the technical term for such - an occurrence, but presumably some needle got stuck in some groove.

The incident will strengthen the view of some critics that I have begun to repeat myself, and indeed never had a particularly wide repertoire in the first place. To them, I swear that the phrase was only meant to come out once. My thanks, however, to the several people who ap-proached me yesterday to say that the best bit by far in my piece that morning was where said the same thing three

Assuming that all the above has only come out once, I now turn to yesterday's conference

The agriculture debate, which was closed by the Minister of Agriculture. Mr Michael Jopling, drew a small attendance. But for the Trade and Industry debate, which was closed by the Secretary for Trade and Industry, Mr Cecil Parkingon every seat was Parkinson, every seat was taken, every fool of standing room full. It was a particularly graphic illustration of the way in which the party has changed in recent decades -reflecting, as it did, the decline of the landed interest and the rise of the sex interest. Mr Parkinson was under no illusion that the vast crowd had come to hear a good, solid. speech about trade and indus-try. Wisely, he delivered them one just the same.

Ranks of Conservatives stared fixedly at him as he pressed on about such subjects as industrial output, not one of them taking in a word of what he was saying.

"I am here as Secretary of State for Industry," he began. What must for him have been the most dreaded public appearance of his life was now under way. There could be no cancellation now. Whatever his sins or vacillations, the heart went out to him.

Then he thanked the people with whom he had worked as chairman, "My wife Ann joins me in those thanks and I add my thanks to her", he said. Mrs Parkinson was there on the platform looking towards him. There was polite ap. There was now a tension in the hall, not least on the platform where sat, among others, the Prime Minister, a figure to whom he owed the fame which, in this past week, he may for the first time have

But the greatest problem of the speech - how to begin it had been surmounted. Both he and those of us who wished him well, could begin to relax. Before long one could treat it like a ministerial conference speech not much different from any other. As tradition dictates at conferences, the head of the ministry began to thank his departmental ministers. Soon, like any other minister at a Tory conference, he found himself saying things that were faintly riduculous. "Ken Baker, the world's only Minister for information Technology", he intoned, as if Mr Baker were the product itself rather than the man who was supposed to sell it. Thus was coojured up the pleasing conceit that Britain now led the world in building ministers for information technology, that soon we would be turning out whirring, compu-terized Ken Bakers, some programmed for the Japanese market.

One last ordeal remained. A Tory conference audience is capable of almost any crassness. Would it subject him to the final embarrassment a standing ovation? He loved a standing ovation as much as the next politician, but not for adultery. Mercifully, the ovation was scated.

Elsewhere, Mr Tebbit, for a superb speech responding to the industrial relations debate, gol a standing ovation of one minute 55 seconds, 45 seconds longer than Mr Heseltine the previous day, according to a man who keeps records. Finally, there was a debate

Food prices

As autumn advances, mest price are starting to show signs of the usual seasonal rise. Beef reasting joints so far are little changed, with topside, silverside and thick flank all ranging from £1.90 to £2.32, but stewing cuts and mince are more expensive than last week in some shops. Lamb ranges from 70p to £1.05 for whole shoulder and from £1.25 to £1.60 for whole legs. Good buys include pork chops at Tesos for £1.26 a pound, and New Zealand lor in the Zolama lamb loin chops reduced in Sainsburys to about 98p a pound. Oven ready chickens in both Tesco and Dewhurst are 59p a pound. Fish prices are all up this week by between 1p and 7p a pound. But herring and mackerel are still super buys at around 68p and 46p a pound espectively.

Although some winter vegetable are slightly cheaper this week, prices remain generally high because of a remain generally high because of a poor crop and tight supplies. White and red cabbages are as much as 30p a pound, as are Brussels sprouts. Cauliflowers are 35-45p each, coursettes 28-45p a pound, calabrese 50-60p a pound and green peppers 45-65p a pound. Potatoes are still steady in price at 12p to 16p a pound, but quality is variable and should be carefully checked. For salads. English celeny at 25p to 35p a salads, English celery at 25p to 35p a head is excellent quality and value, so, too, are Chinese leaves at 20p a pound or even less.

The papers

The New York Times says that President Reagan, responding to pre-election pressure from his country's car industry workers, is not likely to allow an adequate supply of Japanese models to reach American dealers in the near future. The most that can be expected is a modest increase in Japan's current import quote, allowing its car workers to hold their own in a growing market. A two-year agree ment on restricting imports was extended to a third year, giving Detroit a breathing space. But if Derort a breaming space. But it didn't come cheaply, the paper says. The sturdy little no-fills cars that most appealed to consumers have virtually disappeared. In a sellers' market, manufacturers shifted to the high-marking luxury models. And most distressing.
